VOLUME LXXVI — GRENADA, MISSISSIPPI, FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1928. — NUMBER 6.

RAINFALL FOR JUNE 5.16 INCHSE

Ten Days of Rain. Crop Outlook of Both Corn and Cotton.

The weather man who has fixed June weather conditions has shown marked evidence of being an immersionist. It has rained enough for the rain gauge to show 10 days in June, and in addition there have been sundry showers in between. The total rainfall for June up to and including June 24, has been 5.15 inches—about four times the normal rainfall for the month of June.

The weather has greatly interferred with farm work. It has been no unusual thing to observe many cotton fields after the rains with water standing in the middles. Despite the persistent rains, the crops are pretty well worked, and there is not to be seen those crops "eat up with grass", as farmers often use the expression, that one would expect. Corn is looking well and it seems that old corn bids fair to be good, however, it is to be regretted that much of the corn is late. Even the first planting of corn will need rain in July if it matures well.

The cotton crop outook continues to be more and more a problem. With the persistent rains, it would seem that if the boll weevil ever did have an opportunity to eat all the cotton squares and young bolls he wants, he ought to have that opportunity in the year 1928.

PROVINE QUOTES LAW ON MORE TAX LEVY

Hon. J. N. Provine Quotes the Two Legislative Acts Passed at the Recent Session of the Legislature and Gives it as His Opinion that no Legislator Thought that a String Was Tied to the Measures. Says Law-making Body Thought 8 Months Secured.

Editor Sentinel:

The question which is to be decided by the voters of Grenada County, Saturday, June 30, as to voting an increase of 3½ mills in the school tax levy outside of the City of Grenada is so important, that I feel that as a member of the legislature which helped to pass the law which we thought meant an 8 months' school term and which reads that way, I should make a public statement about the matter.

The law was passed without any strings to it. I feel sure that no member of the legislature thought that in order to get the 8 months' term that the counties would be confronted with a demand for levying still more taxes. I am going to ask you to reproduce the two Acts dealing with the 8 months' school term, and if there is anybody who can find anything in these two Acts authorizing the school authorities, from Mr. Bond down, to do what they are trying to get done in this county, he can find a needle in the bottom of the ocean.

First is the law known as "House Bill No. 1012". which reads as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Mississippi, That the sum of two million three hundred fifty-two thousand thirty-five dollars ($2,352,035.00) be and the same is hereby appropriated for the support and maintenance of the public schools of the state of Mississippi for the calendar year 1929.

Equalizing fund—how to be disbursed.

"Sec. 2. That the additional sum of two million one hundred eighty-eight thousand seven hundred twenty-one dollars ($2,188,721.00) for the year 1928, and two million four hundred seventy eight thousand seven hundred and twenty-one dollars ($2,478,721.00) for the year 1929, be, and the same is hereby appropriated out of any money in the state treasury not otherwise appropriated for the support and maintenance of the public schools of the state of Mississippi, which sum shall be disbursed by the state board of education, consisting of the state superintendent of education, secretary of state, and attorney general, in such a manner as to equalize public school terms as nearly as possible throughout the state in accordance with the following conditions.

"(a) In equalizing school terms, teachers' salaries shall also be equalized, grade of icense held, competency of the teacher and living conditions bing taken into consideration.

"(b) The state board of education shall apportion the fund provided for in this act semi-annually to the several counties and separate school districts, the auditor being furnished with a certified copy of the apportionment to be used by him in making out the warrants on this fund in favor of the county treasurers and treasurers of separate school districts. Certified copies of the apportionment shall also be sent by the state superintendent to the state treasurer, the superintendent of public education of each county, each county treasurer and the treasurer of each separate school district.

"(c) The manner in which this fund has been disbursed shall be in the biennial report of the super-

Stephens and Wilson Write Letters

Wilson Tells Senator that if He Will Go With Him He Will Guarantee the Crowds, and Thinks Farmers Would Come at Night Time to Hear Them—Stephens Reiterates What He Said in Former Letter and Again Suggests One Joint Discussion. Stephens States His Idea that all the Candidate has Done and the Character of His Work in Congress Subject to Review.

Last week The Sentinel carried Senators Stephens' answer to Hon. Webber Wilson's first challenge for a series of debates over the state. It will be remembered that the Senator stated that owing to the unusual conditions growing out of bad weather, the farmers were greatly behind with farm work, and that he felt that but few would come out to hear anybody make political speeches just now. The Senator further reminded Mr. Wilson that he (Wilson) had left Washington City before congress adjourned and that he had already made many political speeches, and that it was more than probable that it would not be convenient for either of them to date many places together. The Senator, however, suggested that they bill one speech which could be reported by stenographers for the papers and which would thereby, when published, get all over the state. Mr. Wilson replied to this with the letter which immediately follows:

"Dear Senator:

"Your very unsatisfactory reply to my challenge to meet me in joint debates over Mississippi received.

"I regret exeeedingly that you decline my challenge. You say the farmers are 'badly behind with their work' and that they are 'not so much interested' in you and me.

"The farmers of our State don't plough and hoe at night, Senator, and they may not be interested in you and me personally, but to say that they are 'not so much interested, in the selection of the most able and the most capable man in the race to represent them in the highest deliberative body in the world, is an indictment against the people of our State.

"I have already received telegrams and invitations from all over Mississippi cordially inviting us to come and discuss the issues before our people. This certainly indicated that the people are interested. Yes, Senator, our people are interested. You seem to fear that we can't get the crowds to hear us. I have never spoken to empty benches since I have been in politics, and if you are still fearful that you can't get the folks to come out to hear you, come with me, Senator, and I will assure you that we will have the largest audience you have ever been privileged to address in Mississippi.

"If you will accept my challenge to meet me in joint debate in one or two speeches a day, or as many times a day as suits your convenience, I will agree now to hold the first joint discussion at Como, Mississippi, in the very heart of the district you represented for ten years in the lower branch of Congress—the district which, I might add, went against you in your race for the Senate six years ago after you had served it ten years in Congress. When I ran for Congress I carried my district by approximately 6,000 votes and had a clear majority in 16 out of 17 counties of my congressional district, and the one I lost I lost by only 51 votes.

"In view of these votes in our respective congressional districts, I will agree to meet you in the heart of your district because you cannot, in view of this record, say that you do not need to speak and work there.

"You say that we can hold one joint debate and let the newspapers carry an account of our speeches. Newspapers, like individuals, are oftentimes partial and partisan; and I am not willing for newspapers to be the sole judges as to what transpires in a debate between you and me.

"But come with me, Senator, and let us go into every section of Mississippi, and let us discuss together with the people of our State the issues involved in this campaign.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "T. Webber Wilson"

Stephens' reply to the above:

Jackson, Miss., June 23, 1928.
Hon. T. Webber Wilson,
Wilson's Campaign Headquarters,
Jackson, Miss.
Dear Webber:

"Your letter did not reach me until after I had read it in the newspapers. In effect, your second proposition for joint discussion is practically the same as the first.

"I shall say, as was said in my former letter, that I will not agree to have joint discussions each day. It will be entirely agreeable to me to meet you in joint debate at some time and place agreed upon by us, so that the issues may be clearly stated.

"In the last several senatorial campaigns, challenges similar to yours have been issued. None of them were accepted. I have gone beyond what others have done, because I am really anxious that each should have an opportunity to discuss his own record in the presence of the other.

"You objected to this suggestion and said 'I am not willing for newspapers to be the sole judges as to what transpires in a debate between you and me'. It is neither my idea nor my desire that the newspapers shall be the sole judges in this matter. What I had in mind was to have a stenographer to take our speeches and have the papers carry them just as we make them. There is not a single editor in the state who is so dishonest or unethical as to change even one word.

"In that way, and by distributing the speeches, it will be possible to give each voter exact information as to the issues and as to our individual official records. The people are interested, to use your own language, 'in the selection of the most able and the most capable man to represent them'. It will be possible, by following the method which I suggest, to get our records before all the people so that they may have opportunity to study the issues and may be prepared to vote for 'the most able and most capable man'; whereas it would be impossible, even if we should speak twice a day, as you suggest, to present the matter to more than a small per cent of the people.

"The people are intelligent. Facts, not declamation, will influence them. Records, not bombastic utterances will determine them. They will want to know, our respective records. Records cannot be amended or changed. They will speak in loud tones, either in approval or disapproval of their maker. I am willing to listen to their voices. Are you?

"If so, let us have the meeting that I have suggested. We can let the people know on what committees we have served, what bills we have introduced, what efforts we made to give the help promised if the bills should pass, what committees we have appeared before. What bills we have reported from committees, what bills we have passed, what speeches we have made in the bodies of which we are members, what our activities have been in regard to matters of great importance to the people generally; in short, the complete record of each can be given so that the faithfulness, the diligence and the effectiveness of the candidate may be set forth. It is quite easy for one who has not been in congress to tell for what he stands and what he will do; it is sometimes very difficult for one who has been in congress to tell what he has really done. But, it is the duty of the candidate to discuss his record.

"If you desire to accept my suggestion, I shall be glad to see you and make the necessary arrangements."

Your friend,
HUBERT D. STEPHENS.

Stephens Attends National Convention

The Senator Went to Houston. Establishes Headquarters and Will Soon be Active in the Campaign.

Jackson, Miss., June 27.—Senator Hubert D. Stephens, of New Albany, candidate for re-election to the United States Senate, has established campaign headquarters in Jackson in the Edwards Hotel building and expects to make an active campaign during the next two months in seeking re-election to the place he has held for the past six years.

As a delegate to the Democratic National Convention to be held in Houston, Texas in a few days, Sentor Stephens will be out of the State for a short while but on returning will begin actively to stump the State in behalf of his candidacy. During his absence the campaign headquarters will be in charge of Hon. Leon F. Hendricks, prominent lawyer of Jackson, who has recently been appointed campaign manager for Senator Stephens.

Senator Stephens is very optimistic over the prospects. Friends over the State declare that his re-election is a certainty.

The primary is set for August 21.

LYMAN ABBOTT RUNS INTO BRIDGE.

Monday afternoon Mr. Lyman Abbott of Clarksdale ran his car into the concrete of one of the bridgers about two miles west of town on the Grenada-Charleston highway. The steering wheel was broken and Mr. Abbott's chest badly bruised but it is thought that there was nothing serious about his injuries. Mr. Abbott states that he does not know how he came to run into the bridge. He blames nobody but himself.

JUDGE McLEAN AND WIFE ARRIVED THURSDAY

Judge Wm. C. McLean and wife reached Grenada Thursday afternoon on the Panama imited from their Florida home. The judge, it will be recalled, has been regarded as critically ill, and much gratification is felt by his many friends that he has been able to get about and to return home. He is looking exceedingly well under the circumstances.

CHILDS FURNISHES FIRST COTTON BLOOM

O'Bryant Comes With Second June 25.

The Sentinel received from Mr. R. F. Childs, near Holcomb, the first cotton bloom of the season which was plucked on the morning of June 22. It was of the Delfos 6102 variety. Mr. Childs writes that he has a fairly good crop notwithstanding the continued rains. Mr. Childs is one of those industrious farmers who is all the time on his farm job.

The second bloom came from Mr. Will O'Bryant of the Oxberr community, another good farm and substantial citizen. Mr. S. Wells of Carpenter's Store community also reported a bl June 25.

Blooms were brought in Tuesday morning, June 26, by Adelvert White and John Evans, both substantial colored farmers. One also came Tuesday from Rollin Weaver, on Mr. Lamkin's farm at Mace, Miss.

FOURTH OF JULY AT FAIR GROUNDS

Revival of Old Time Fourth of July Spirit. Automobile Races by Some of the Country's Greatest Speeders. Base Ball. Lindbergh Imitators Will Ride the Air and Carry You Up Towards the Moon. Prize Fights at Night. Ten Thousand People Expected.

In the years ago everybody began to think for weeks in advance "What shall we do to observe the fourth of July?" Usually there was a picnic or a fishfry in the country had by neighbors and friends. In many cases some public speaker was asked to make a patriotic address, but for some reason, people, it seems, have drifted away from this ennobling custom. Possibly they are in too big a hurry, or possibly the people of America have got to "figuring" matters so close that they feel that they cannot afford to go to the expense of having a public dinner. Automobiles, pressing clubs, silk stockings and many other similar things have been added to the family expense bill until it seems that there is a strain from one month to another, from one year's end to another.

The management of the North Mississippi Fair has been doing something to keep alive the fourth of July spirit for several years. This year it has gone itself one better and is planning a celebration that will appeal to the spirit of bravado, and that will serve as a real thrill for all who attend. It means something to get together with your friends, neighbors and acquaintances on the fourth of July.

This year there will be automobile races by some of the real speeders in cars that have made records on the tracks all over the country. The automobile races will begin at 3:30 o'cock in the afternoon.

At 1:30 o'clock p. m. there will be a base ball game between Greanda and Webb. These are both crack teams and to many there is nothing that will beat a base ball game for a thrill.

While all these things are taking place, Lindbergh imitators will be flying around in the air and for a small sum will carry any and all up and give them a view at the earth as it may look to he man in the moon.

That night at 8 o'clock, there will be three fistic counters in which dreams of Dempsey, John L. Sullivan and Gene Tunney will run through the minds of the gladiators.

There will be a prize given to somebody of $50. With every gate ticket, a coupon will be given. Ask the fair management for further details about the fifty dollar prize.

Ten thousand people are expected that day. Get yourself ready to bring others with you. Forget your business cares and anxieties for the day, and by so doing make yourself better prepared to discharge all your obligations the next day and for the days to come. The right sort of rest and recreation is always wholesome.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT AT GRENADA HOSPITAL

The Sentinel feels that if all the various words of commendations which have come from high professional sources are to be credited, that the Grenada Hospital should be congratulated on securing Miss Grace Klein, now of Chicago, as the new superintendent of the hospital.

She was a student of the Minnesota University, and was graduated in nursing from that institution. After graduating, she spent three years in anaesthetic work at the celebrated Mayo Clinic, and has also spent two years in doing post graduate work at one of the big hospitals in New York City. Miss Klein is due to arrive in Grenada Saturday, July 1.

Since the resignation of Mrs. B. S. Dudley (formerly Mrs. Easterling) Miss Tilly Norris has been the temporary superintendent of the hospital and she has shown wonderful adaptability and splendid judgment in her management.

Democratic National Convention in Session at Houston

The National Democratic convention met at Houston, Texas, Tuesday, June 26. At this writing (Thursday morning) the platform committee has not reported and from what has leaked out as to the committee's deliberations, it is having a rather "hot time in Georgia" over the wording of a lawenforcement plank and how, if at all, this plank shall be made to refer to the 18th amendment and the Volstead Act. A couple of the Bishops of the Methodist church are attending the convention as representatives of certain temperance organizations and of the Methodist church. It is gathered from the radio and the press that a conservative plank will be adopted on the prohibition matter, a thing which is already settled, and that a plank will be incorporated in the platform that will serve to assure the farmers of the country that an honest effort will be made to reach their troubles. The keynote speech of the convention by Claude Bowers, editor New York World, dwelt at length, on farm matters and was a speech that used the carving knife on the Republican party. Nominating speeches were begun Wednesday night. When Franklin D. Roosevelt ascended the platform to place in nomination Gov. Al Smith of New York, he was given a great ovation and at the conclusion of his speech, the convention gave way to enthusiasm and a demonstration perhaps never before equalled in a party gathering. It is evident that Smith has the nomination within his grasp and that it can be settled whenever his friends say the word. It is thought that the nomination will be made tonight (Thursday). The next thing will be the naming of a candidate for Vice President who will in all probability be either Senator Robinson of Arkansas or some other southern Democrat. However, a strong effort is being made to work a vice presidential boom for Woolen of Indiana and Baker of Ohio.

The Mississippi delegation it appears is divided half and half for and against Al Smith, and the press reports that some two or three of its members indulged in the past time of a fist fight Wednesday night during the sitting of the convention.

WADE WILLIAMS KILLED IN OKLAHOMA

The remains of Wade Williams, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe B. Williams of Grenada, were laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery Wednesday afternoon after funeral services from the residence conducted by Rev. J. H. Holder assisted by Rev. E. R. Henderson.

Wade Williams would have attained his 21st birthday had he lived to October 13, next. He was a young man of fine character, of good habits and gave evidence of those virtues that make sure of a useful and honorable manhood.

Some three weeks ago, he and three other young men, John Goza, Fred Myer and Rowell Savage, left Grenada in a Ford car for the wheat fields of Oklahoma. How his tragic death came about had not been fully learned at the time of his burial. Owing to broken wires, it seems that the family has had trouble in getting accurate information. It is quite certain that he was in a car wreck and one report has it that his car was struck by a moving train. The young men who went away with him have not reached home, and perhaps the correct details of the tragic accident will never be fully known.

The family have the sincerest sympathy of the entire community. Only parents know anything about the agony they must feel and what it means to have one's children taken away to return no more. May the God of mercy temper the sadness of the hour to their soul good.

Vice President Says Stephens Worker

So States News Story Sent Out From Washington City. Stephens' Work Might Serve as Pattern for Other Congressman.

Washington, June 25.—There is quite a difference between talking and working in Congress, and Vice-President Dawes has not failed to make a mental note of it.

Several days before adjournment of the First Session of the Seventieth Congress, Senator Stephens, Mississippi Democrat, found one of his colleagues in a Senate anteroom thoroughly exhausted.

"What's the matter?" he asked the tired member.

"Hubert, I'm all in," he was told. "I have just finished a four-hour seech."

"I haven't made a real speech during the whole session," Stephens informed the tired orator, who gasped in astonishment.

About that time Vice-President Dawes passed through the room.

"Mr. Vice-President," the orator called, "Hubert Stephens just told me that he hasn't made a speech at this session. What do you think about that?"

"I know he hasn't," Dawes answered. "Since I have been here, though, I have noticed that Stephens has succeeded in getting more of his bills passed than any other member. It doesn't take speeches to get good work done."

The tired crating member mopped his perspiring brow and gazed at the door through which the chief of the Senate passed.

THREE YEAER OLD CHILD HIT BY CAR

Paul Schmitz, the little three year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Tillman Schmitz, on the Provine farm just south of town, was run over by a car driven by an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Lee, of Tampa, Fla. Monday. The child ran right out in front of the car and it was impossible to keep the car from hitting him. The bumper struck the child and possibly broke the pelvic bone. He was knocked down and the car ran over him but the wheels did not touch his body. He was at once carried to the hospital where every attention was given him and he is doing nicely.

ROTARY THIS WEEK

Rotary enjoyed a good attendance Tuesday, though there were three absent. Secretary Mal Lawrence is in Houston as a delegate to the Democratic Convention, while Bill Hoffa is supposed to be there too, but only "at large". Beth Horn is over in Alabama somewhere for a couple of weeks. All of them will probably make their attendance, which will give us one hundred per cent.

Three visitors were present: Miss Lena Smith, Mr. L. A. Olson and Mr. Bill Blake, of Chicago.

President Roly surrendered the gavel to our new president Andrew Carothers, who responded with a very appropriate speech of acceptance, expressing his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by the club, as well as reporting that part of the Rotary International Convention at Minneapolis that he attended before being called home on account of the illness of his wife.

Short talks were made by Miss Lena Smith and Mr. Olson, while Dunc and Hubert both paid well deserved tributes to our outgoing president.

The program next Tuesday will be in charge of the Grenada Highlanders. Let's make this a big meeting and show the boys that we are interested in them.

Reporter.

CREED WATKINS AND WIFE ON A VISIT

Mr. E. C. Watkins and wife of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, are visiting relatives in Grenada. Mrs. Watkins is a sister of Messrs. Cas and Edgar Heath. Mr. Watkins was reared not many miles from Grenada. After reaching his majority, he taught a country school for a while, but decided that he would try his luck in the then comparatively new state of Oklahoma, so now about twenty-five years ago, he went to Oklahoma City where he has ever since resided. His first connection was a minor one with the Ridenour-Baker Wholesale Mercantile Co., of which he is now assistant manager. Mr. Watkins has entire charge of the office force which numbers about 30 different employes. The company does about a five million dollar business and is considered one of the largest and most substantial concerns of its kind in that section. Creed Watkins is every inch a high class gentleman and a man worthy of every confidence. He began at the bottom and has worked his way up. It has been his rule to do well whatever he undertook to do, whether the task be a small or a large one.

Houston Delegates In Auto Wreck

Malcolm Lawrence and Three Others in Car That Tumbles Over Embankment. Nobody Seriously Injured. Mr. Lawrence Cut About the Face and Arms. Injury Does Not Keep Them Out of Convention.

Houston, June 25.—Four members of the Mississippi delegation reached Houston this morning very much the worse for wear, somewhat disfigured, but still in the ring, after a narrow escape from death in an automobile accident.

E. G. Whitehead of Winona, G. M. Lawrence of Grenada, J. R. McClarty, of Water Valley, and A. M. Waddell, of Grenada, were making the trip from Mississippi in a Buick car owned by Mr. McCarty, when near Kenner, La., about 35 miles from Lake Charles, Sunday afternoon, they attempted to pass a Ford car that had been holding the road ahead of them and swerved back to the middle of the highway just as they were going to pass. The Buick left the highway, turned completely over, and landed up against a tree, a complete wreck.

All of the occupants sustained painful cuts and bruises, but no serious injuries. They received medical attention at Kenner, and at three o'clock this morning boarded the Gulf Coast line train carrying the main Mississippi delegation to Houston. All wore bloody clothing, their baggage having been sent ahead via express, and looked very much like a squad of casualties going back from the front line trenches.

Aside from these casualties, the Mississippi delegation arrived in good shape, with the exception of Attorney General Rush Knox, who wounded his heel on a suit case clasp, and Congressman W. M. Whittington, the state convention keynoter, who was busy on the train this morning dressing a finger with Mercurocrome, having wounded the digit on a Pullman door.

Miss Belle Kearney, former state senator, and a member of the state delegation at the New York Convention, narrowly escaped death under the wheels of a taxicab on Travis Street early this morning.

Note: Advices by letter bring the gratifying news that none of the party was seriously injured or badly hurt Malcolm Lawrence perhaps sustained the worst bruises and cuts which is causing him to have to appear in the convention hall with more plasters and bandages than the others of the party. He and McLarty were on the front seat and McLarty was at the wheel when the car ditched. Whitehead and Waddell were on the rear seat asleep. The party had traveled all the night before. It was at first thought that Whitehead was seriously injured. Mr. Waddell is not from Grenada, the telegraphic story was in error in that particular.

HON. WEBBER WILSON TO SPEAK IN GRENADA

Will Speak at Court House in Grenada Thursday Night, July 5, in the Interest of His Campaign for the United States Senate against Sen. Stephens. Wilson One of the Most Captivating Men on the Stump. Should have a Good Hearing.

Announcement is made that Hon. Webber Wilson of Laurel, Jones County, will speak at the court house in Grenada on next Thursday night, July 5, at 8 o'clock, in the interest of his campaign for the United States senate against Hon. Huber D. Stephens. Mr. Wilson is quite a young man but is regarded as an orator of exceptional ability. He is undoubtedly an easy and graceful speaker and one of those unusually pleasing on the platform. He was reared at Coldwater but after receiving his license to practice law, located at Laurel where he was chosen county attorney and later district attorney of that district. When Hon. Paul B. Johnson decided to retire from congress, Mr. Wilson was chosen his successor and has served six years in the lower house of congress, but has decided that he wants to go to the upper house of congress, hence he has shied his castor into the race against the present incumbent, Senator Stephens.

The Sentinel bespeaks for Mr. Wilson a good audience and a fair hearing.

SOME BISCUITS

St. Louis Firm Gets Big Flour Order.

Clarence Saunders, associated stores, Grenada, Miss. purchased 7 cars Sweet Rose Flour for distribution in their stores. So states B. C. Lemon, representative of Bernett Craft & Kauffman Milling Co. St. Louis. According to Mr. Lemon, this is one of the largest single orders ever placed for a high grade flour by a retailer in this section of the country and represents approximately five and one half million biscuits.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE OF LAND

Notice Is Hereby Given that

WHEREAS by mortgage deed of trust dated March 20th, 1924 and of record in the Office of the Chancery Clerk of Tunica County, Mississippi in Book 30 Page 487 and also of record in the Office of the Chancery Clerk of Grenada County, Mississippi in Book 61, Page 333 and also of record in the Office of the Chancery Clerk of Montgomery County, Mississippi in Book 43, Page 326 to 329, L. P. Cummins and Julia F. Cummins, husband and wife, conveyed the land hereinafter described to the undersigned John C. Adams and S. J. Shepherd, as trustees, to secure a certain indebtedness therein described to the Bank of Commerce & Trust Company, a corporation, reference to the record of which deed of trust is made, and

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a part of the indebtedness secured by said deed of trust when the same became due and payable and the owner and holder of the said indebtedness under and by virtue of the terms of the said deed of trust has declared the whole debt secured thereby to be due and payable, such declaration being after the lapse of three years from the date of the trust deed referred, and has requested, after the lapse of three years from the date of the trust deed, the said trustees to foreclose the said deed of trust and to make sale thereunder of the property hereinafter described, which was conveyed in trust in the said trust deed for the purpose of paying and satisfying the indebtedness secured and still unpaid and expenses of foreclosure.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and under and by virtue of the authority conferred upon said trustees by the said trust deed and in strict accordance with the terms and provisions of the said deed of trust and of the laws of the State of Mississippi in such cases made and provided and for the purpose of paying and satisfying the indebtedness secured by the said trust deed, and all charges and expenses of foreclosure, the undersigned John C. ## 10 YEARS AGO IN GRENADA

From the Files of THE GRENADA SENTINEL

Mr. W. B. Hoffa was a business visitor in Memphis last Saturday.

Mr. W. F. Martin was in Memphis last Saturday and Sunday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Riley of Alabama are the guests of their sister, Mrs. W. A. Carl.

Mr. J. W. Vance spent several days the latter part of the past week in Memphis with his sister, Mrs. Maggie Ladd.

Messrs. A. S. Tatum and R. N. Brooks spent last Saturday night and Sunday among the bright lights of Memphis.

Little Miss Carrie McGinnis, of Memphis, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. P. A. Dantzler.

General J. H. Brinker and Mrs. Brinker are on a visit from Washington, D. C., and are at their daughter's, Mrs. Lamar Ross, near Tie Plant.

Mrs. J. J. Alexander, of Itta Bena, Mr. R. T. Kimbrough, from Lexington, Mr. W. D. Kimbrough, of Carrollton, Mrs. J. H. Ambrose, of Carrollton, and Mr. Rowell Billups, of Carrollton, were in Grenada a few hours last Sunday evening, guests of their relative, Mr. O. L. Kimbrough.

Mrs. F. S. Hill is in Grenada again, much to the delight of her host of friends and acquaintances. Mrs. Hill is living with relatives at Covington, Tenn., while her husband is serving Uncle Sam in the Medical Unit.

Maj. J. E. Tyson was in Grenada for a few hours Monday. Mr. Tyson is a fine lawyer and a highly intellectual man. Only recently he tendered his services to the government and has been made a Judge Advocate with the title of Major. The Sentinel congratulates Mr. Tyson.

Mrs. J. L. Barnard arrived in the city Tuesday from her home in the Crescent City for a visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hoffa on South Main.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Laycock are just back from Kentwood, La., where they went after spending ten days or more at Biloxi, to visit a sister of Mrs. Laycock's.

Mrs. W. P. Wilkins was the delightful hostess at a lovely bridge party Tuesday afternoon in honor of the attractive Mrs. F. S. Hill, who is back home on a visit.

The friends of Mr. C. E. Colbert, formerly connected with the Grenada Bank, will be interested to know that he holds a responsible position with the Central State Bank of Memphis.

Mrs. H. T. Rogers (nee Mamie McElwrath) returned to her home in Corscana, Texas, last Saturday after spending six weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. McElwrath, in Grenada.

The home of Mrs. Neil Carothers on Margin Street was the scene of a very beautiful "Daisy Reception", when on Tuesday afternoon of last week from five to seven-thirty she received her many friends in honor of Miss Countiss, the popular daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Countiss wha on the following Thursday became the bride of Mr. S. C. Pecot of Georgia.

DISEASE, NOT EXERCISE, IS CAUSE OF "ATHLETIC HEART," DOCTOR SAYS

Chicago—The old belief that the heart increased in size according to the increased amount of work it was called upon to perform is a myth, Dr. Mathias J. Seifert, Chicago, says in a study of the effect of exercise upon the heart, prepared for the Gorgas Memorial Institute here.

If an athlete's heart increases in size it is not because of the exercise he has performed, but because there was something fundamentally wrong with it to begin with, Dr. Seifert declares.

"It is now found," he says, "that the predisposition of the heart to enlargement is the result of infectious diseases, such as scarlet fever, pneumonia, rheumatism and too strenuous exercise in youth, as well as to physic traumas.

"Exercise for pleasure causes no enlargement of the heart, but on the contrary produces a strengthening of the whole body and, normally, even a smaller heart."

Such conclusions have been proved, Dr. Seifert said, by the roentgenologis and experimental researches of Drs. Deutsch and Kauf of the University of Vienna. They showed that the healthy heart does not react to work with enlargement, but only the diseased heart is subject to dilation.

"The heart, as well as every other organ of the body, needs exercise in order to maintain the normal physiologic equilibrium of the individual," Dr. Seifert continued. "The best returns from exercise will be obtained if, at the beginning, one never exercises until tired out.

"By blowing out the breath while lifting, or throwing, or applying muscular effort, the heart, the arteries, and the blood pressure will be safeguarded. Conversely, holding the breath while lifting, throwing and applying muscular strength will have a harmful effect upon the heart and blood vessels, and will raise the blood pressure to a dangerous degree. A good rule before taking up a sport is to submit to a thorough examination by, and receive instruction from, your family physician. Lack of exercise, with lack of mental effort, will reudce the individual to a low level of existence."

LIFE AS I SEE IT

(By T. E. Winborn, Jr.)

Love after all is the supreme motive power of the world. No worthy undertaking is ever carried through, no aspiring ambition is ever brought to reality, nor any worthwhile dream made an actual fact, unless love is behind it, unless an all powerful love is the center about which everything else moves.

And yet there are some who deny that it's worthwhile to be in love or to consider love a factor in life's journey. I wonder if it's worth while to fight for the one you love and then have her nurse your wounds away. I wonder if it's worth while to mend and sew and toil for the man you love, and then have him take you in his arms and whisper that in all the world there is none sweeter than you. Yes, I wonder. I wonder if that emotion is worth while that can make a paradise out of a shack where two hearts beat as one, that can make a heaven out of the most sordid of surroundings, where there are two whose idea of happiness is being with each other.

No, there may be nothing to love; but I for one, will stake my last red cent on any undertaking where love is behind it, on any effort that a man may make, if love urges him on. Because there are no mountains that he cannot cross, there are no obstacles he may not surmount, there are no dangers he may not go through, if love leads him and he holds his life in his hands, ready to give it if necessary, in the end. So, though he should fail yet he will have made a glorious fight while he lasted.

If you care for a girl, only for what she gives you, in kisses and petting, etc. then you may be sure that you do not love her. It's mere infatuation. But if you care for her as a sympathetic companion, as a friend who believes in you; and, if you believe in her, if she is the center about which all your really worth while thoughts and doings wind, if no other girl has half the attraction for you that she has; in other words, if she's the sweetest girl in the world, then you'd better look out, as it's a million to one that you're in love and matrimony and a little home is your only hope.

The Only One

When the moon swings low in a summer sky
And reflects from a dying sun,
When the stars hang out to let the worlds go by.
Then I think of the only one.

The only one—there are thousands,
But there's only one for me,
And she's the one I'll always long for,
When I think of what used to be.

When whippoorwills call in the nighttime,
And I'm alone and lonesome and lone,
Then across the distance that spans us,
Fly my thoughts to those at home.

I think of the girl that I've left there,
The pal that I know has been true,
The one who shall always be waiting,
'Til the worlds fade out in the blue.

Of them all that I've known, she's the sweetest,
She's the girl of my dreams come true,
The only one, to me, of the thousands,
And, sweetheart, this one is you.

FIRST CLASS GRADUATED BY DELTA STATE COLLEGE

Cleveland, Miss., June 22.—The Mississippi Delta State Teachers College has graduated its first class. A group of seven young ladies have been granted the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education at the commencement, while a group of six others will receive their degrees at the close of the summer school this year.

Of these graduates one will go to University of Missouri with a special scholarship. This young lady is Miss Margaret Zeigel of Cleveland. Another, the president of the class, Miss Frances Shelton, of Lambert, will teach in the public schools of Jackson. The others will teach in other public schools of the state.

The Mississippi Delta State Teachers College has completed its third year of work and this splendid group of young women is a fine testimonial of the fine work the school is doing. There is a building program under way at the school which includes the erection of three new buildings at the present time. In addition the enrollment of students has crowded the school to overflowing.

The work at this school is directed by Professor W. M. Kethley. This young man was former assistant superintendent of schools of Jackson, before coming to the Delta State College. Mr. Kethley took his graduate work and holds the Master's Degree from Columbia University.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Notice is hereby given that bids will be received by the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of Grenada, Mississippi, at its meeting to be held in said city on Monday, July 2nd, 1928, at 8 p. m. o'clock, for the purchase by said city of a new Model A Ford Touring automobile.

The Board reserves the right to reject all bids.

This June 12th, 1928.

Column About Colored People of Grenada County

Items by J. H. Phillips

Our Cherished Hope Gone

There was much surprise and expressions of regret in this community when it was learned that Prof. J. W. Addison would no longer be with us as principal of our school. Regardless of how much we desired him or the efficiency of his work the powers that have made the change. In this, as in many other matters among our group, we can not fully understand why these things crop out as they do. The progress that the school has made under his management was evidence that the board of trustees had made no mistake in their selection of him as principal for the time he has served and this community had no complaint to find in his management of the school. He entered heartily into everything that the people of our group were interested in, and seemed to be delighted to work with the parents as well as the children. His removal for cause or unacceptable contract conditions is much regretted by our people. We hope the time will come when the wishes of our people will be respected and that they will have an opportunity to have some say in matters that relate to their well being.

Harry Ratcliff, of Memphis, is in the city visiting his mother and his legion of friends. During his services as mail carrier in the city of Memphis he has so many days of vacation during the year and he always spends the time at his old home. We all appreciate his choice to be among us. He is the picture of health and enjoys the work he is engaged in.

Rev. W. H. Golden, one of Grenada's old citizens now pastor of our church at Tupelo, came over to Grenada last Saturday to bring the remains of his oldest daughter, Christiana, for interment in the family burying ground at this place. She had been sick for quite a while.

Though having lived away from family and friends for several years, we feel existing in our bosom a love and sympathy that gives up pain to realize that this loving and lovable character is no more. Mrs. Golden and other children accompanied the corpse. A host of relatives and friends join with the bereaved in this hour of sorrow.

We had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Lam, of Jackson, Tenn. He is a practicing dentist and is seeking a location. We hope he will be sufficiently impressed with the possibilities of this section and will hang out his shingle in our midst. We need him here.

WEEKLY NEWS LETTER

(By W. F. Bond)

The health of our people is of first importance. Therefore, trustees and teachers should arrange to give the boys and girls of our schools the very best health training possible. In counties where there are health units this is very easy to do, for in such counties the children are not only taught the few simple fundamentals facts about how to stay well, but they are also given a thorough physical examination and defects are corrected. Health is worth more to any boy or girl than all the gold and silver in the world. This is hard for people who are not sick to realize.

We hope that our people in every county will do everything possible to take care of the health, especially, of the children of the county.

Press-Scimitar Carries Grenada Story

What the Correspondent Saw on His Short Visit to the Town—Many Worth While Things Here and Says that it is the Most Beautiful of Beautiful Towns.

The following Grenada "write-up" by special correspondent, Robert S. Dudley, appeared in Press-Scimitar of Memphis, June 26:

No one could find a community whose people are more industrious than those of Grenada, nor could a person wish for a city that is more beautiful than Grenada.

An organization which presumably is doing more for the promotion of Grenada county's leading industry—farming—is the Grenada Farm Development Association, which was organized 14 months ago to stimulate interest in diversified farming with special stress upon dairying.

The originator of the organization was J. T. Thomas, president of the Grenada Bank, who predicted that if the business men of Grenada would lend farmers of this community $20,000 with which to buy cattle, the sale of farm products and milk would increase 200 per cent within three years. Since the origin of the association a little more than a year ago the sales have increased 500 per cent, and the correspondent was told that most of the $20,000 has been repaid.

Now the business men make monthly contributions which take care of current expenses of the association. A field man is employed to supervise the buying of cows, and to help planters with their problems. He is H. C. Hampton.

Newcomers Help Area

Two persons who are largely responsible for the improved agriculture now evident in Grenada county, are G. R. Fulton, county agent, and Bela M. Mark.

The story of Mark's work is unusual. He is a native of Hungary and a college graduate of that country, the correspondent was told. After his arrival in the United States he edited Hungarian newspapers in Detroit and Cleveland, and then wandered southward to Mississippi.

"It was love at first sight," Mark declared, "and I made up my mind to induce others of my nationality to share the opportunities of this state."

Three foreign families from the crowded districts of the North and East already have settled in Grenada county and Mark said two families now are on the way to Mississippi. He expects to have 10 families here by the end of the year. They are being placed on 30 and 40 acre tracts of land and, according to citizens here, are expected to be a great help to the community in its effort to change from the one crop system to diversified farming.

Last year 7000 bales of cotton were produced in Grenada county, according to G. M. Lawrence, editor of The Grenada Sentinel. Great quantities of hay, corn and both sweet and Irish potatoes are grown from Grenada county soil, it is said.

Industries Are Large

An industry which is a great asset to Grenada is the Ayer-Lord Tie Co. The annual pay roll of the firm is $200,000, a representative told the correspondent. The concern, which has its mill and village three miles from this city, treats railroad ties, telephone poles and other timber products. Timber in this vicinity is to be found in large proportions.

Another valuable concern is the Gayoso Lumber Co.'s local mill which is known as the Grenada Hardwood Lumber Co. Its pay roll is immense.

Grenada is strategically located. At this city the Grenada-Cairo and the New Orleans-Chicago lines of the Illinois Central railroad meet. Grenada also is on the main line of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad. The station master here said there are 22 passenger trains running through Grenada every day. A great many railroad men reside here and bring money to the city. The Illinois Central depot has been enlarged, and now is modern in every way.

The Masonic order owns a beautiful $50,000 home which recently was constructed by local contractors.

Newspaper Is 75

The religious atmosphere is observable. Everyone seems to be affiliated with some church. There are five churches for which citizens of this city—the Methodist, First Baptist, Second Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopal. Pastors are Revs. W. E. Farr, First Baptist; J. H. Holder, Methodist; R. L. McLeod, Presbyterian; R. W. Emerson, Episcopal, and E. R. Henderson, Second Baptist. The Methodist church is constructing a $75,000 building.

One of the oldest newspapers of north Mississippi—The Grenada Sentinel—is published here by G. M. Lawrence. It is a weekly paper and denotes Lawrence's progressiveness, although there are 75 years of history behind it.

The schools, both public and private, are comparable to any in the south. At the head of the Grenada public school system is Prof. John Rundle. Those who compose the city board of education are Dr. R. A. Clanton, W. H. Kirk, J. B. Perry, Cowles Horton and J. H. Oliver.

A stately building in the city is the one which houses students of Grenada high school. It recently was constructed at a cost of $125,000. A building to be used exclusively by the primary department of the Grenada grammar school is being erected at a cost of $10,000.

Clubs Are Active

Also situated here is the Grenada college, a woman's school sponsored by the Methodist church. It has an annual enrollment of 200, and is a four-year college. Citizens say a $300,000 endowment for the institution is a certainty. Dr. J. R. Countiss has been president of Grenada College 18 years. Under his administration many things have been accomplished, among which was the erection of an excellent dormitory at a cost of several thousand dollars.

Besides the Grenada County Farm Development Association there are two outstanding civic organizations in this city. They are the Rotary Club and Civic League.

The local Rotary goup, in addition to taking an active interest in the farm program, performs the usual functions of Rotary. Boys' work is given attention. A student loan fund is maintained by the club. Club officers are R. W. Jones, president, and G. M. Lawrence, secretary. A. M. Carothers will take the president's office July 1.

The Civic League, composed of women, has as its main object the beautification of the city. And its efforts have brought satisfactory results. Mrs. H. J. Ray is chairman.

The 700 citizens of Grenada have chosen W. S. P. Doty' as their mayor several times. He now holds the office. The board of aldermen includes: H. L. Honeycutt, J. P. Pressgrove, W. E. Jackson, E. C. Neelly, J. H. Murray and L. C. Proby.

A full time fire chief is employed by the city. A $12,500 fire truck was purchased recently.

In the city of Grenada there are ten miles of asphalt pavement. The county is covered with well built gravel roads. The Jefferson Davis highway and state highway 51 are the principal trails through this vicinity. Grenada county is on beat 1, and has as its representative on the state board of supervisors, Kemp Mattingly, who in his eight years as a member, has done a great deal toward road building in this area.

Two strong banks, the Grenada Bank and the Grenada Trust & Banking Co. are found in this city. J. T. Thomas is president of the Grenada Bank and B. C. Adams is cashier. Officers of the other institution are H. J. Ray, president, and W. K. Huffington, cashier.

The Grenada Hospital is a $25,000 institution, owned by Drs. F. S. Hill and J. K. Avent. Associated with them are Drs. J. S. Sharp and R. A. Clanton.

Grenada was founded in July, 1836, when two rival towns, Tullahoma and Pittsburg, disposed of their names and united.

AUTO TAGS CONTRACTED

Mississippi to Spend $16,851.39 for 1929 License Plates.

Jackson, Miss., June 23.—The recently created auto tag purchasing commission, composed of J. C. Roberts, chairman of the state highway commission; Webb Walley, state treasurer, and Carl C. White, state auditor, completed contract today for the 1929 supply of automobile tags for the state of Mississippi.

The contract was let to the Gopher Stamp & Dye Company of Minneapolis, Minn., at a price of .0558 cents per tag for a total of $16,854.39 f. o. b. Jackson. This price represents a saving to the state of about $6,932.04, as compared with the price paid per tag for the 1928 supply, which was 7⅞ cents. The 1928 contract was awarded to the S. G. Adams Stamp Company of St. Louis, who made the next lowest bid today.

The present contract price per tag for the 1929 supply is 2 29-100 cents less than the price per tag for this year's tags.

The commission required a penalty bond for the full amount of the contract and received assurance from the factory representatives that the contract would be carried out and delivery made as required.

BETTER NOT SUPPRESS THAT STORY

By M. Foster

In the Houston Press

At a recent national conference of newspaper men the following story was told:

Mr. Well-Known-Citizen was injured in an automobile accident. Reports indicated that he had been with a female companion at a questionable resort and that while returning he was in an intoxicated condition, wherefore the accident. It was his first offense, and because of the man's high standing, his family, his church, etc., the papers were induced to suppress the news.

* * *

A year or so later the big man's new theater was ready for its opening. A rumor was in circulation that the house was of faulty construction. The night before the big opening, while the orchestra was practicing, something fell from the ceiling and hit a musician, injuring him badly but not seriously.

The manager of the theater rushed to the newspaper office asking that the story be omitted; that its publication might make the people believe the building was really unsafe.

* * *

Right on his footsteps followed the owner of the theater. "Print it," he said, "tell the truth and tell it now. Wish I had not asked anybody to suppress that story about my unfortunate escapade a few years ago. Instead of getting it all printed and the thing ended I am still the gossip of every woman in town before she decides to bid her hand at the bridge club meeting. They whisper the story all over town. It gets worse every time they tell it.

"So I say whenever anything happens in which I am involved, I want the papers to tell all the facts and tell them straight rather than have the story garbled and gossiped about every time some woman's club meets or some men have a smoker."

* * *

That's one reason why we don't suppress news. It's better for all concerned to have the story told right than to have the public whisper it on street corners. More harm has been done to business and to the characters of men and women by the rumor put in circulation than by the facts correctly reported.

* * *

So if you get into trouble at any time come around, tell us the true story and let us print the facts rather than have your neighbor send out snowballs of gossip that soon become hideous black balls of scandal.

HALF-HEARTED
Never Felt Well

"I don't see why women will drag around, in a half-hearted way, never feeling well, barely able to drag, when Cardui might help put them on their feet, as it did me," says Mrs. Geo. S. Hunter, of Columbus, Ga.

"I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks.

"I could not work, and just dragged around the house.

"I got very thin. I went from a hundred and twenty-six pounds down to less than a hundred.

"I sent to the store for Cardui, and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve. My side hurt less, and I began to mend in health.

"Cardui acted as a fine tonic. I do not feel like the same person. I am well now, and still gaining."

SHALL GRENADA SLEEP BY THE WAYSIDE?

We once read a story of man whose pockets were filled with bread and who went to sleep by the roadside and after playing Rip Van Winkle awoke and complained that he was starving. The thought has sometimes run through our mind that some of us, too many of us, about Grenada were apeing this sleeper.

The time for plain talk is here. Equivocation and ambigious words and phrases can no longer serve to make us think that something big and profitable is going to turn up tomorrow or next year. We have been talk-that too long, and there have too many that have allowed this sort of a mirage to serve as an opiate to dull their better judgment and to cause them to act the part of the negro who sang "Come day, go day God send Sunday".

Shall Grenada sleep by the wayside while others are marching towards the goal that the hour and the day offer? As we have said in these columns so many times before, we cannot live on what we have been, what our fathers were, or what Grenada was. In making this assertion, we are not unmindful that but for what our fathers did and what they bequeathed us, we would in the same sort of fix the Irishman was when he went in bathing and later found himself separated from where he had left his clothing on the bank.

The county never before owed so much as it does today. The town never before owed so much as it does today. The people of the county never had such a large individual indebtedness as they have today.

On the other hand, it is true that we have much to show for much that we owe in good roads, good school houses and better residences and other necessities and luxuries without number. But these are not revenue producers.

One may answer that what is true of Grenada and its surroundings is likewise true of every other community in the whole country. Admitted, but the other man's woes and obligations do not minimize ours; on the contrary, in an important sense, they make more personal and more serious our own. It is said that misery loves company, but there is no company hunting misery.

Let us take a look in on ourselves. A few years ago, we had millions upon millions of feet of merchantable timber, but that has gone. With the going of this timber also went the mills that worked it. Timber was our biggest asset. This takes us back to the soil. Much of it has been allowed to waste, wash away by the rains and to be impoverished by one persistent crop.

A few years ago, the country churches served to hold communities together and to build in the hearts and the minds of the youth those virtues which the Savior taught while in the flesh. Many of these churches are gone; many more are poorly attended and still many more are abandoned. Of course this is but a part of the general transition through which business and almost everything else in the country is passing; where it will stop, the God of the Universe only knows. But the country is losing a big asset in the church that set back from the roadside amid the shade of the trees; that church preached to every passerby. But this aside.

Let's look at another side of the picture: Go almost any direction from Grenada and look upon the growing crops, the beautiful trees, the flowers and other things through which Nature speaks all the time, and the mind will almost involuntarily exclaim, "What a great section of the country we have". But it is yet in a large measure a virgin section, an undeveloped section. We need money to develop it. We need capital here to help us to help ourselves. Nevertheless we must not sit with folded hands and wait. Let us be turning the chunks under which we can get our own hand stick The cow and the dairy business is a potent factor to help us over the hill. We have hitched one of our traces to these, and they are proving more than worth while, but why walk on one foot when we have two, why travel on our knees when we can stand erect like men and face the deep blue sky with a consciousness that we have done our best?

We are in a position to assert without any doubt whatever that Grenada has an industrial enterprise that will work from 150 to 200 hands ready to come here if we will show the proper sort of appreciation of what it means to get a sure enough factory. It is an enterprise ready to come here from the New England states. It is an enterprise that would mean an annual pay roll of fully $500,000. To get this, it might be that the town and county would be expected to subscribe for maybe one hundred thousand dollars worth of preferred stock; land upon which to build the plant and homes for the operators would be needed; for all this ten or fifteen acres would be required. The community would not be expected to donate the land but it would be expected to see that a price was not placed upon it as if it contained a diamond mine.

Yes, Grenada has the men who have this money; they have it in bonds lying hard by and drawing a small rate of interest. If some of these bonds were sold and the money put into an industrial enterprise such as we have in mind, why it would bring returns equal to what it is drawing now, and over and above that, a thing would be done that would add to the general worth of the community and that would make the pathway of our children an easier and a better one.

The Scriptures tell us of the man who enlarged his barns and who forgot everything else in what he was laying by for "me and mine"; his was but the lot of millions who have come after him.

Is Grenada ready to pay the price of getting out of the beaten cow path and is she ready to rise to the situation that is before her?

Golden fruit hangs on the boughs of the trees of opportunity about us. We have tried and tried all cotton, and this we know will not do for the future.

With our dairying business and with a few industrial enterprises, our futures is guaranteed. When one industrial enterprise comes to us, that means that others will soon follow. Are we ready to meet the obligations that a new day brings us?

Standing still time is past. This is a fast age, maybe too fast, but we must move with the procession. Methods of forty, fifty or one hundred years ago will not do for the present hour.

Is Grenada ready to consider giving the proper invitation to the industrial enterprise of which we speak?

ADVERTISE IN LOCAL PAPERS, SAYS MANUFACTURERS' RECORD.

The following appeared on the editorial page of the last issue of the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record, a publication which is credited with an analysis of business conditions and with a knowledge of what is required to make a community grow and with a grasp of what it takes to make business prosper hardly equaled by any other publication in the whole country.

Particular reference is directed to the following words used by the American Banker. "A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in the local town by looking at the business mentioned in the newspaper."

The article is worth a perusal by any business man and is one about which it might be worth while to do a "figuring":

> "The Manufacturers Record has often urged the business people of the South to advertise freely in their local papers for the influence which this will have in stimulating confidence at home and in attracting the attention of outside people who may see copies of these papers. This point is strongly presented in an article quoted by the Ocala, Fla., Star, from the American Banker, which said:
>
> 'No business man in town should allow a newspaper published in his town to go without his name and business being mentioned somewhere in its columns. This applies to all kinds of business—general tores, dry goods, groceries, furniture dealers, manufacturing establishments, automobile dealers, mechanics, professional men, druggists; in fact, all classes of business men. This does not mean that you should have a whole or half or even a quarter page advertisement in each issue of the paper, but your name and business should be mentioned, if you do not use more than a two line space.
>
> 'A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in the local town by looking at the business mentioned in the paper. The man who does not advertise his business does an injustice to himself and the town. The man who insists on sharing the business that comes to town but refuses to advertise his own is not a valuable addition to any town. The life and snap of a town depend upon the wide-awake, liberal advertising men.'"

MINISTER COMMENDS SENTINEL EDITORALS.

The Sentinel received a letter from one of the leading and most able ministers of the Methodist church of north Mississippi commending our editorials of last week, and especially the one under the caption, "If The Democrats Will". We appreciate the minister's words on commendation, because, in the first place, we think him sincere in all things and then we regard his judgment as being good about matters in general.

We have been very generously commended for the editorial referred to and some of the daily newspapers of the country have seen fit to reproduce it and pass it along to their readers.

Below is the minister's letter which was written with no expectation of our publishing it, but it is good, and shows such a breadth of spirit and such a sincere desire to reach correct conclusions that we are passing it along to our readers in the hope that it may serve a good purpose in the mind of others:

"I beg your pardon for saying this. I don't know who wrote the editorials in this week's issue of The Sentinel; but they are so good that I cannot refrain from telling you. I would not take any laurels from your good father but I find myself hoping that you wrote these editorials. If you did, you may reasonably hope for your paper to grow in popularity and usefulness. I have felt sure for many reasons that the paper would improve but am still surer. Boy, put out some more editorials of that kind and a lot of your readers will get their political bearings. You know that I want to be a Democrat, I have been what I thought is a good Democrat but lately I have thought that I would go in my political tent and wait awhile, now I am beginning to think that possibly I've been mistaken.

"I would say something about the prohibition situation. Particularly did your editorial of last week, 'If The Democrats Will', help me get my bearings. I will reserve that until some day when I drop in to your office. You must not construe this remark as a criticism of what you had to say on the question. Yet you know that this one of the most delicate questions, if a man is honest and speaks his mind, he is liable to be misunderstood. Well, you give us a good paper and I read it with both pleasure and profiit".

ELECTION SATURDAY.

The election Saturday to determine whether or not a tax levy of 3½ mills additional shall be levied for school purposes throughout the county outside of Grenada is a matter that does not touch personally The Sentinel. This paper is always interested in properly putting every public question in its true light before the people. Several articles have appeared in these columns against the proposed tax increase and it is to be regretted that those sponsoring the increase have not seen fit to setforth the other side of the matter. The right sort of public discussion should throw light on any subject. The Sentinel is always ready for its readers to use its columns for a sane and reasonable presentation of any matter.

Regardless of party alignments, business conditions, good or bad crops, old time virtues are still 100 cents, and are the best asset that one can have. They are good at home; they serve as the best passport away from home.

The thinking man ought to be able to read in the signs of the times that it is time to buy less, owe less and own more.

AUTOMOBILE WRECKS MULTIPLY..

Automobile wrecks and accidents multiply. There have been several in and near Grenada within the past week. It is evident that something will have to be done to protect the traveling public against each other. At this writing it seems that about the best way to do this is to require every car driver to carry indemnity insurance. Too much does the good car driver presume on the driver in the other car knowing his business and observing the rules of traffic.

LET STEPHENS REMAIN

Senator Stephens has accepted the challenge of Congressman Webber Wilson for a joint debate. South Mississippi has one Senator and a Governor, why not let north Mississippi keep her Senator in Washington? Turn about is fair play.—Gulf Coast Guide.

There are some few, not many, who no doubt wish that they had said less and thought more about what they would not do if Al Smith was nominated.

By the way, if the bully who denominates himself the grand dragon of Mississippi is as vacuous in knowledge as he is inconspicuous among Mississippians the poor man needs a guardian.

The Sentinel thought it read the signs of the times well enough even ten months ago to see Al Smith's nomination.

PROVINE QUOTES LAW ON MORE TAX LEVY

intendent of education to the legislature."

Then follows what is known as "House Bill No. 24" providing for an 8 months' term. It reads as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Mississippi, That section 91 of chapter 283 of the laws of 1924 be amended so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 91. Continuous session. The schools shall be kept in session for at least eight months in each scholastic year, provided, funds are sufficient and the trustees and county superintendent approve that length of school term. Trustees may, however, with the consent of a majority of the patrons, divide the session, and have such portion of it as they deem proper taught at some other time during the scholastic year but in that case they shall notify the superintendent of such division and the scholastic month at the beginning of which they wish their school to open. The county superintendent may close all schools for the Christmas holidays, for an equal period of time, not to exceed two weeks and, upon application from the trustees may close any school because of an epidemic prevailing in the school district, or on account of the death, sickness, resignation or dismissal of the teacher; but such schools shall be allowed their full time after being re-opened during the scholastic year.

"Sec. 2. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repeaed.

"Sec. 3. That this act take effect and be in force from and after its passage."

Yours very respectfully,
J. N. PROVINE.

BILBO NOT TO JOIN TOUR

Declines Invitation to Go On "Know Mississippi Better" Train.

Jackson, Miss., June 25.—Gov. Bilbo has sent a formal reply to the invitation of the "Know Mississippi Better" train, declining their invitation to join them on the coming tour of the train which will be the fourth annual tour.

The invitation was extended the governor last March during the session of the Legislature and invited him and Mrs. Bilbo to be the guests of the train, stating that drawing room accommodations would be set aside for their accommodation.

Gov. Bilbo's reply is as follows:
Hon. Dennis Murphree and committee, Know Mississippi Better Train, Jackson, Miss.
Gentlemen:

I wish to ask your pardon for the long delay in replying to your letter of March 17. I have been so tied up with legislative matters that I have not had time to attend to my correspondence.

While I appreciate your gracious invitation to join the Know Mississippi Better Train, jaunt this summer, I must respectfully decline the invitation for the reason that I do not, as governor, care to give the train official recognition, as I do not think the result will justify the expense.

Of course, the trip is a nice outing and if the parties going have the time and money for a pleasure trip, no one should object. That's their business.

I was just thinking that if the money spent on a pleasure trip of this character could be concentrated and used in the proper way and in the proper exploitation of the state's resources, much good could be accomplished.

Editorial Note: This paper quite agrees with Gov. Bilbo, and we say this in all kindness to others. Let one just note how many different ones on the pay rolls of the state and the counties are billed for this train and are to have their expenses paid out of the state and county treasuries. It is buncombe of the most exagerated kind. What can Mississippi expect to get from the section where the train is scheduled for this year—what the little boy shot at, "nothing?" We have yet to learn of any town, county or community that has been perplexed about taking care of the new citizens brought in by this train. Neither have we known of anybody's being overworked to take a census of the new enterprises brought in by this train. Yes, it is a fine trip—nice especially for those who have their expenses cared for by the tax payers of the state.

CONGRESSMAN BUSBY'S RECORD AS A POST OFFICE BUILDER

When Congressman Jeff Busby was a candidate for election, and elected in 1922, he published a statement, from which we quote as follows:

"Winona has for several years been entitled to a Federal building for its post office. Had I been furnished a negro hod-carrier to bring up the brick and mortar, when Winona was first entitled to this building, I could have long since finished it myself with a common trowel.

"Water Valley has been entitled to a Federal building for its post office for a long time. The lot for the building was bought and paid for on the 5th of March seven years ago; yet not a brick has been placed on the ground. What is the matter?

"Lack of service by our Congressman.

"I stake my future on this: If I am elected to Congress I will get both of these buildings for the people in a short time. I believe in giving official service. Ask my home people about it."

That has been six years ago. Mr. Busby is serving his third term in Congress. Winona is yet without a Federal building, site, sound or suggestion, notwithstanding Mr. Busby "could have long since finished it himself" with a negro hod carrier and a common trowel.

Water Valley does have a post office building, the only one, we believe, in Mr. Busby's district since his incumbency, and the appropriation for it was made during Mr. Sisson's administration. Considering that in Mr. Busby's own language, "the lot for the building was bought and paid for on the 5th of March seven years" prior to 1922 at Water Valley, we are led to wonder how long it would take Mr. Busby to get a public building in a town when the site has not been selected, the plans submitted, nor steps taken except Mr. Busby's assurance that "the appropriation is available."

The truth is that the "pork barrell" Federal building appropriations are aways available to congressmen under certain conditions and limitations, dependent upon the congressman's standing with the administration in power; his diligence in looking after the constituent interests, and his ability, in short, as a "go-getter."

Take Mr. Busby's own word for it. Ask his home people about him.

Mr. Busby's shortcomings, whatever they may be, convey no merit in Mr. Aldridge, and yet "Charlie" Aldridge has in a marked degree the general characteristics of a "go-getter." Ask his home people about that. And he can qualify for this high office without hampering his usefulness or jeopardizing his achievements with vain and empty pre-election utterances.

MRS. C. H. GUY BREAKS WRIST IN TWO PLACES

The Sentinel feels sure that the many friends of Mrs. C. H. Guy will be pained to learn that she broke her left wrist a few days ago in two places. This information came to this paper on a postal card from Mrs. Guy but she failed to state how she sustained the accident. Her present address is Monteat, N. C. box 33.

In a few minutes' time the entire home can be freed of mosquitoes. With an improved FLY-TOX Hand Sprayer, spray FLY-TOX directly toward the ceiling, also on the draperies, in the closets and on the screens. It will not leave a stain on the most delicate of wallpapers, hangings or fabrics. Spray upwards until all parts of the room are filled with the finely atomized spray. Within a few minutes all the mosquitoes in the room will be dead, regardless of whether the windows and doors are open or closed. In addition to being stainless, FLY-TOX is fragrant, is absolutely harmless to people but sure death to all household insects. Every bottle guaranteed.—Adv.

Chancery clerk, G. D. Thomason, was taken violently ill Wednesday night and was apparently no better Thursday afternoon. Much interest is felt in his affliction. He has been very seriously ill many times.

* * *

Miss Annie Lou White of Pinola, Miss. en route to Columbia University, stopped over for a short visit in the home of Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Henderson this week.

* * *

Mrs. R. F. McLellan, of Philipp, Miss., was a delightful guest of Mrs. S. A. Morrison last week-end. She with her little boy and niece were very charmed to see such great improvement in the City Beautiful since leaving here 18 years ago. Mrs. McLellan was Miss Annie Mayhew who was born and reared here and taught 5 years in the city schools. Going from here to the Greenwood school where she met her splendid husband, who is a very successful planter and former banker.

Miss Louise Baker, who resides in the western part of the county is visiting her aunt, Mrs. S. A. Morrison, on College Avenue.

* * *

Mrs. E. A. Penn and her daughter, Dorothy, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. G. F. Lawrence and her sister, Mrs. Martha Draughon, motored to Nashville a few days ago, the trip having been made to carry her mother and sister, who have been visiting at the Penn home, back to Nashville.

* * *

Miss Thelma Jackson has a most charming visitor in the person of Miss Belle Stollenwerk, of Faunsdale, Ala. Miss Stollenwerk arrived Tuesday afternoon.

* * *

Miss Thelma Horn left Wednesday to spend six weeks at Columbia University, New York. While away she expects to visit numerous points of interest.

* * *

Mrs. Josie Hamsley of St. Louis, Mo. and Mrs. Edith Loudermilk of Pasedena, California, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hamsley. The former is the mother of Mr. Hamsley and the latter is a sister.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Horn left last Friday in their car to spend several weeks in Russellville, Ala. visiting Mrs. Horn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Floyd. Her brother, Jack Floyd, who had been here visiting them, returned home with them.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hoffa, their daughter, Miss Louise, their son, Billie, and their young daughter, Martha, left last Saturday morning for Houston, Texas, to visit Mrs. Hoffa's aunt, Mrs. M. D. L. Martin. They have been taking in the sessions of the Democratic National Convention which opened there Tuesday morning.

* * *

Their Grenada friends will be interested to know that Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lawrence, of Greenwood, are the proud parents of their firstborn, a young daughter, who made her arrival last Saturday morning, June 23. The young lady has been named Bettie Sue.

* * *

Malcolm Lawrence left Saturday night for Winona where he joined Mr. Ed Whitehead, of Winona, to accompany him to Houston, Texas for the Democratic National Convention. Mr. Whitehead is a delegate to the convention from this congressional district of Mississippi and Mr. Lawrence is an alternate. Mr. Robert McLarty, of Water Valley,, the second delegate from this district, was included in the party which made the trip from Winona via automobile.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lockett are enjoying the pleasure of a visit from Mrs. Lockett's brother, accompanied by his wife and two children, Rev. A. T. Coleman of Liberty, Texas, and Miss Minnie Cox of Jackson, a sister of Mrs. Lockett.

The ever gracious Mrs. A. P. Guntharp of McComb City, arrived in Grenada Monday to visit her sister, Mrs. Walter Garner. Mrs. Guntharp is always a welcome guest to all Grenadians.

One of the most enjoyable bridge parties of the season was given Thursday afternoon of last week by Miss Katherine Lufkin at the Lufkin home in honor of Miss Sue Finch of Anna, Ill. There were four tables.

Those present besides the honoree, were: Misses Mildred Stevens, Hazel Inman, Katherine Todd, Louise and Rebecca Stokes, Virginia Lewis, Hazel Burt, Edith Pearson, and Tina Owens and May Bradley of Columbus, and Mesdames Spivey Kent, Sam Garner, George Garner and Roy Burt. Delicious refreshments were served. Miss Lufkin is an elegant hostess and was assisted in doing the honors of the occasion by her mother and younger sister, Miss Chloe Lufkin.

* * *

Mrs. E. M. Sherwood, Mr. W. J. Sherwood and daughter, Bettye Mae, and Miss Beth Wallace have returned from Evansville, Ind. having made the trip by automobile. They were accompanied to Evansville by Miss Thelma Wallace who had been visiting in Grenada.

* * *

Mr. J. H. Neely and wife and children returned Sunday from a two weeks' tour of Texas made in their automobile. Most of the time they spent in the Rio Grande Valley. Mr. Neely spoke of seeing Mr. Laster and Mr. John Horton and family. He speaks in glowing terms of the great development of that section and of the many public improvements which have been made within the past two years. Mr. Neely states that Welasco is nine years old but that it is wonderfully developed and has already a population of 7,000. He says that that county is spending $850,000 in making concrete roads and that many of the roads have already been completed. Confidentially The Sentinel will say that Mr. Neely says he went over the border into Mexico and drank and that while over there he drank oh, the name of it has slipped the writer's memory. Joe says Mrs. Neely was with him, however, an inquiry of her might bring another story.

GIRL SCOUT DEPARTMENT

On Thursday, June 14, the Girl Scouts of troop 1 met on the campus of the grammar school.

Plans for Kamp Kiwani were discussed and circulars and regulations were distributed. The registration cards were also given to the scouts who were registered.

The scouts decided to have meetings every Thursday until camp, which will be about six weeks hence. A recreational outing was planned for next week and the patrol leaders are to have charge of games, of telling all scoutes of their plans, and transportations.

LIFE AS I SEE IT

(By T. E. Winborn, Jr.)

Happiness—
Health—
Has-beens and could bes—

There is hardly anything more pathetic than has-beens. You see them every day. Old men that once were champions of something or other, now broken and old, shambling down life's highway, living in the memory of their now faded glory, and longing for the old days when the crowd that now passes them by cheered them on to greater victory. Old women or those past the prime of life trying vainly to call back the faded beauty to their cheeks, trying vainly to hold that attraction and that personality that was theirs in their younger days. Yes, this is the most pitiful thing about life, this growing old and the fading of glories that were once yours; and the has-beens of life are woefully pitiful, but there are people infinitely morr pitiful than these. They are the could-bes. You see them too every day. That man rather past his prime who was such a wonderful ball player in his day but who gave it up for a day laborers job and has been a day laborer ever since and will be, probably forever. Wha perhaps could have been another Ty Cobb or another Tris Speaker. That woman who had so much natural talent in music when she was a girl but who married and gave up all of her chances for being another Galli Curci. That vast army of people with so much natural talent aong some line being covered up in the routine of some back-breaking job into which they do not fit.

Yes, the could-bes are far worse than the has-beens. The has-beens has something to recall, something in his or her memory of a grand past when the world worshipped at their feet and success was theirs. They know what it is to look down from the pinnacle, to stand on the peak with the world around their feet. But there is nothing so hopelessly pitiful as the coud-bes, those who have never tested their talents to the utmost, who have it in them to make themselves great, but who have for some reason or other failed to take advantage of their opportunities and have failed to reach the high point of fame and success. They have nothing to look back to but sorrow and shame, they have nothing to recall but the galling sense of failure to take what by all rights was theirs, to march to that goal toward which their heads were once headed.

It is one of the tricks of life that there should be has-beens, that the world should forget; but the has-beens has an infinitely better standing with himself than the could-be, who will never know to what heights he might have climbed, what courts of glory he might have reached.

Happiness, after all is but a state of mind. It is being content with what you have, and I don't mean being content with what you are, because there's a big difference. Being content with what you have is being content with what heridity and luck have bestowed upon you, be it good or bad. Being content with what you are is being content with what you and your environments have made of yourself and no man should be content with that, because there's always a chance for improvement whether you are a ditch digger or a white frequenter.

You will always find happiness just where you least expect it. And you can never find it when you are forever seeking it. It is like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. It is always there just beyond reach, just over the way, in the neighbors yars or in the next few years to come, and if you could know your neighbor just a little better perhaps his was not happiness after all, and when the next few years go by perhaps happiness is still in the future because it is the most elusive quality in the world and can never be in the future unless you make it for yourself today. It is like the story told about the old Arabian trader. All his life he had traveled over the world looking for a speal rare gem that would make him rich and that he had often heard of but had never found. At ast after years of search the old man decided to give up and return to the little farm that his father had left him and that he had not seen since he left it when a young man. He returned to the farm and began to cultivate it and one day while plowing near his home he turned up one of the gems that he had spent his life looking for. There it had lain right under his nose all the time that he had searched the world for it. So I think it is with happiness. There are a vast horde of people that frequent our resorts all over the world in search of that gem of life, happiness, but few of them find it. They demand too much and get, only too little. No it is not the people that have the most money nor visit the most beautiful spots of the world that find happiness, it is the people that are poor and require little to delight them and that live in commonplace spots that as a rule are the happiest. It is those folks that are blest with the talent of being able to adjust themselves to any environment and to any set of people that are happy. Because after all happiness is but a state of mind.

I remember once in a large congregation of people at a revival meeting, and the evangelist leading requested that all those Christians in the house who felt that they had something to be especially thankful for, would please stand and praise the Lord in that way. I suppose there were at least half a hundred people who arose and thanked a kind heavenly father for one thing or another but not a single one of them seemed to be thankful for their health .And to me that one of their blessings was the greatest of all. To feel the

25 YEARS AGO IN GRENADA

From the Files of THE GRENADA SENTINEL

Tom Phillips, who is employed by the I. C. Railroad Company, with headquarters at Water Valley, is visiting homefolks.

Miss Nellie Askew left last Monday for Grenada where she will spend several days the guest of Mrs. J. M. Wyatt.—Water Valley Itemizer.

The popular Mr. W. H. Hogan, accompanied by his two charming sisters, Misses Pearl and Mabel, came up from Duck Hill Monday evening and were the pleasant of friends for only a few hours.

Cascilla Masons gave a banquet on Wednesday, 24th. Invitations were extended to the Masonic Lodge at Grenada. Several attended and reported having a most enjoyable time.

Rev. S. A. Steel preached in the Methodist church last Sunday morning and evening. Both sermons were fine indeed. Something good is always expected of Mr. Steel, and on this occasion he measured fully up to expectations.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Grenada Central Fair and Live Stock Association is called to meet next Tuesday morning, June 30, at 10 o'clock, in the mayor's office.

District Attorney W. P. Tackett, and candidate for re-election, dropped off at Grenada a little while Monday morning. He was on his way to Calhoun county court.

Mr. George Ransom, and his wife, of Jackson, Miss., are spending a few days with their lovely mother, Mrs. M. M. Ransom.

The handsome gold medal that was offered by Mr. Nelson to his class in penmanship of 32, was very deservedly awarded to Spencer Bell. This is quite an honor and his many friends congratulate him upon his success. The judges were Messrs. A. J. McCaslin, W. M. Mitchell and Prof. J. T. Thomas.

Mr. R. W. Mullin and wife, who live a few miles in the country, are the proud possessors of a boy baby. He arrived this week.

Misses Katie Weeks and Lottie Hallam were the pleasant guests of friends in Duck Hill Sunday afternoon.

Prof. J. N. Powers and several of the other teachers of the public school are registered with the Oxford Normal this week.

The genial J. R. McClendon, of Greenville, is visiting his parents in Grenada.

Mr. Sam Bloodworth has returned from a several weeks' visit to his sister at Iuka, Miss.

Miss Ione Mansker, of Holly Springs, is visiting relatives in the city.

Miss Berta Brown, of Cascilla, paid Grenada a visit this week.

Miss Connie Gordon, a sweet young lady of Duck Hill, was a visitor of the Misses Weeks Monday and Tuesday.

Suffering With SICK HEADACHES

Mr. Charles F. Todd, of Estesburg near Waynesburg, Ky., says:

"I was suffering with nervous headaches. About once a week I would have these headaches, and have to quit work, and go to bed for about twenty-four hours. I would have pains in my neck, and right behind my right ear.

"A merchant at Estesburg told me to try taking Black-Draught, which I did.

"It relieved me. From that time on, I would take Black-Draught as soon as I felt like I was going to have one of those headaches—and they wouldn't come on.

"Every few weeks, I take three or four doses of Black-Draught, and I feel so well, and do my work, and don't lose any more time with headache."

HOG SANITATION OVERCOMES PEST

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A bath in a 50 per cent sulphuric acid solution—or of 50 per cent solutions of hydrochloric, nitric, or acetic acids, saturated solutions of copper or iron sulphate or copper acetate—would be too much for most living beings. But the egg of the ascarid pest of swine, otherwise known as the round worm, can take such a bath—and thrive. The eggs will actually develop, experiments in the United States Department of Agriculture found, and become infective while in solutions of such powerful chemicals. Moreover, they can endure temperatures as low as 13 degrees below zero (Fahrenheit), and when they thaw out will develop if conditions are favorable. Other eggs buried for more than a year survived. Of the disinfectants known to science only certain phenols were at all effective against ascarid eggs.

Such discoveries provided the reasons for the particular steps in swine sanitation which have come to be known as the McLean County system, it is explained in a recent summary of the development of the system by the men representing the Department of Agriculture, in the first large-scale demonstration of the effectiveness of this method of reducing the mortality among young pigs. Ascarid infection and the subsequent multiplication of the parasites has been so serious that it is estimated that owing to these worms and other agencies not more than 50 to 55 per cent of the pigs farrowed arrived at marketable age. These internal parasites and the diseases due to or associated with filth account for a high proportion of the deaths. Accidents and cholera also take a toll, but in many cases strict attention to sanitation has made profitable ventures in hog raising which had proved unprofitable without sanitary control. In McLean county in a six-year trial on 30 farms the system averaged in actual practice 97.8 per cent of a theoretical perfection, and this allows for the inclusion of pigs constitutionally weak. It does not eliminate the deaths from cholera and from accidents which fall outside the field of sanitation.

Ground Grain Best for Young Market Lambs

Lambs will begin to nibble at grain when about two weeks old. They should be fed in a creep where the ewes cannot enter. Ground grain should be fed until the lambs are five or six weeks old, but after that whole grain will suffice. They may be started on a mixture of ground corn, ground oats and bran. The proportion of corn should be gradually increased because the lambs must be fattened while they grow. A good grain mixture to feed young lambs the last month or six weeks is shelled corn six parts, linseed meal one part. The lambs will consume a great deal of hay. Fine, leafy and bright fourth-cutting alfalfa hay should be used whenever possible. If handled in the manner just outlined the lambs should be ready for market while still nursing their mothers. They will be about three months old and weigh from 60 to 65 pounds when marketed.

Finds Ear-Marking Pigs Is Profitable Practice

"I have been well repaid for all the time and trouble involved in ear-marking my pigs during the last five years," says Amos Kirchhofer, who fed a ton litter in Adams county, Indiana, last year. "In the first place ear-marking enables me to determine the exact amount of pork which can be credited to each sow when I market the pigs. Sows that do not produce profitable litters have no place in my scheme of raising pork.

"Another thing; I like to select breeding stock from sows which are consistent producers. Gilts from prolific sows will be more likely to farrow large litters of thrifty pigs. One cannot select these gilts if he loses sight of their ancestry—hence the importance of ear-marking."—L. M. Busche in Farm Journal.

Clean Out Sheep Barn Before Lambing Time

Clean out the sheep barn thoroughly when you are ready to begin lambing, bed it deeply and then add more straw now and then to keep the quarters clean, but don't clean the shed any more until you are done lambing. The heat generated in the bedding will do much to keep young lambs from chilling on cold nights. As soon as reasonably warm weather arrives clean the shed promptly and after that once a week change the bedding. Be sure to dock the tails at ten or fifteen days of age and make wethers out of the rams. If you are not experienced in these jobs get some neighbor who can show you. It is really very simple and attended with very little danger if you are careful.

Feeding Young Cattle

The practice of feeding younger cattle for market is becoming more general. Some feeders who try fattening calves and yearlings are disappointed because they do not get as rapid gains or as good finish as they do with other steers. In order to secure satisfactory results in fattening young cattle, it is necessary to select feeder calves of good beef type and breeding.

SWAT THE SCANDALMONGERS

Distributors of False Charges Against Presidential Candidates Says Collier's Magazine.

Don't believe the current slanderous whispers concerning presidential candidates.

Scandalmongering is being used to hurt candidates for both the Republican and Democratic nominations. The distributors of innuendoes and of irresponsible charges are peculiarly reckless this year. They appear to think that the American public is base enough to swallow any damaging story.

Secretary Hoover and Governor Smith at this writing, the leading candidates of the two parties, are especially the targets of scandalmongers. Their eminence arouses hostility and unscrupulous attacks.

Herbert Hoover is accused of various infamies he never committed. He is charged by the whispering gallery with having made millions exploiting the Chinese and other peoples.

Lies, pure and simple. Secretary Hoover is not a millionaire in the first place, and according to the testimony of those associated in business with him, he did not make what he has by hornswogging the Chinese or anybody.

Governor Smith, according to the slanders, is a drunkard and a man of low character. Nothing could be further from the truth. Smith is an absteminous person and a man of the highest standards of personal conduct.

Reasons, and persuasive reasons, can be found for opposing the nominations of both Secretary Hoover and Governor Smith, but they have nothing to do with the rumors loosed by the whispering cliques.

Discount the gossip you hear concerning this year's candidates by your knowledge of the false charges made against other presidential candidates and even against other presidents.

Woodrow Wilson, a man of inflexible character, was called a person of oose morals and a profligate in 1916 when he was running for the presidency. It was nonsense of course, but the busy little liars went on just the same and many folks believed them.

Similarly, Roosevelt was accused of being a drunkard. Finally, you remember, came the famous trial which proved that the ex-president was not addicted to alcoholic excesses.

President Harding, too, was a victim of malicious slander. His ancestry was attacked, and even since his death strange and untrue stories have been told of his financial relationships.

Every president has been the object of such scurrility, and it has almost seemed that the better the man the worse the libel.

George Washington was attacked more bitterly than any other president. If the scandalmongers were to be believed, the Father of his Country ought to have been put in jail.

Nothing was too fanatically untrue to be said of Jefferson or Jackson, and the mildest criticism of President Lincoln compared him with a gorilla to the disadvantage of the latter.

So, if anybody comes to you with wild stories showing the immorality or turpitude of one of the presidential candidates remember what was said of their predecessors. Then ask the man or woman who is distributing that particular bit of gossip if the teller is willing to accept responsibility for its circulation.

Most important: Remember that the scandals circulate about candidates have little to do with their finess for office.

If you are against Herbert Hoover, you don't have to bolster up your opposition by swallowing a book of fairy tales about crimes he never committed.

Secretary Hoover is a strong man, standing definitely for certain political princples and policies. If you oppose his principles, or if you merely don't like the cut of his jib, you aren't compelled to justify your criticism by listening to scandal concerning him.

So, too, with Governor Smith. His principles and purposes are well known. Some like them and others do not. If you are opposed to him and his ideas, say so but don't let your own attitude be contaminated by attending to irresponsible talebearers.

Instead of permitting this presidential campaign to degenerate in a contest between slanderers and liars, let's keep the discussion on a plane of good temper and reality.

Both parties are offering men of unusual power and intelligence. Let's for once have a campaign in which the voters are as decent as the candidates.

THE EARLY LIFE OF SAUL

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 6:4-9; Phil. 3:4-6; Acts 22:3, 27, 28.

GOLDEN TEXT—Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Paul as a Child.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Boyhood of a Great Preacher.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Saul's Training and Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Influences Shaping Saul's Early Life.

I. Israel's Responsibility With Reference to God's Laws (Deut. 6:4-9).

1. Central truths to be taught (vv. 4, 5).

(1) Unity of God. "The Lord our God is our Lord." He is God alone, therefore to worship another is sin.

(2) Man's supreme obligation (v. 5).

God should be loved with all the heart, soul and might, because He is God alone and supreme. This being the first and the great commandment, we know what is man's supreme duty.

2. How these truths are to be kept alive (vv. 6-9).

The place of God's Word is in the heart. In order that it may be in the heart (1) "teach it diligently to thy children" (v. 7). The most important part of a child's education is that given in the home in the Word of God. How sadly this is neglected today! (2) To talk of them in the home (v. 7). This is the right kind of home life. How blessed is that home where God's Word is the topic of conversation. (3) Talk of them when walking with our children and friends (v. 7). (4) Talk of them when retiring for the night (v. 7). The last thing upon which the mind should rest before going to sleep should be God and His truth (5) Talk of them when rising in the morning (v. 7). How fitting that God should speak to us the first thing when we awake! (6) Bind them upon thine hand (v. 8). This was literally done by the Jews, even to the wearing of them in little boxes between their eyes. (7) Write them upon the posts of the houses and on the gates (v. 9). Such a remembrance of God's words would create a spiritual atmosphere most desirable.

II. Saul's Ground of Confidence (Phil. 3:4-6).

He had everything a true Jew gloried in.

1. Circumcision the eighth day (v. 5).

This was the literal requirement of the law for those born under the Abrahamic covenant.

2. "Of the stock of Israel" (v. 5).

This shows that he was a true Jew, related to the chosen people by blood and birth.

3. Of the tribe of Benjamin.

Benjamin had always remained loyal to the national customs. The first king of Israel, whose name he bore, was of Benjamin.

4. "Hebrew of the Hebrews" (v. 5).

This showed that he was of Hebrew parentage and not a proselyte.

5. Touching the law, a Pharisee (v. 5).

The Pharisees were of the sect most zealous for all the rites and ceremonies of Judaism.

6. "Concerning zeal, persecuting the church (v. 6).

He proved his zeal by positive effort to stamp out that which was threatening Judaism.

7. "Touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless" (v. 6).

So exactly had he conformed to the outer requirements of the law that he was consciously blameless.

II. A Sketch of Saul's Life (Acts 22:3, 27, 28).

In this sketch he gives us a glimpse of his birth, education and citizenship.

1. His birth (v. 3).

Though born at Tarsus, a city outside of Palestine, he had been brought up in a strict Jewish home. Tarsus was the capital of the province of Cilicia. It was a city of prominence because of its commerce and culture. It was one of the three principal universities of that period.

2. His education (v. 3).

Born out of Palestine, he was sent to Jerusalem for his education. This fact shows that he belonged to a zealous family of Jews. His teacher was the great Gamaliel, a doctor of the law and the leader of the strict sect of the Pharisees.

His citizenship (vv. 27, 28).

He was by birth a Roman citizen because Tarsus was the capital of a Roman province. In the providence of God the great apostle to the Gentiles was given the prestige of a free-born citizen of the empire. While he was religious, he was at the same time patriotic. He was loyal to his country and proud of his citizenship.

OY BEANS POOR FOR FATTENING

While the soy bean is one of the ost valuable summer legume crops North Carolina, it is a poor feed fattening hogs.

"Experiments conducted by our rkers have shown conclusively t soy bean seeds are unsatisfac- y for pork production because y are lacking in palatability, oduce a soft carcass and give a amount of pork per acre when mpared with other standard feeds ed for fattening swine," says arl H. Hostetter, in charge of vine investigations at the North arolina State college. "On the her hand, soy bean meal has been nd very palatable, and when as a supplement to corn, rapid uniform gains are secured."

Professor Hostetter conducted e test in three different trials, us- g 188 pigs, comparing soy bean al with fish meal. He found that e pigs made about the same daily in in weight, but that the cost the gain was greater where the mals were fed the soy bean meal d that both lots paid about the me price for each bushel of corn nsumed. The pigs used were h grade Poland China animals d were sold on the Richmond arket, and there was no dockage cause of soft or oily carcasses.

In another test where he used 5 pigs in four trials, he compared h meal with one-half bean meal d the other half fish meal. In ese trials, the total fed required o produce 100 pounds of gain was out the same. However, the pigs nsumed about twice as much of e soy bean meal and fish meal ixed and therefore brought down e value of the soy bean meal to bout $30 a ton instead of $50, hich was the price actually paid.

Slow Movers Preferred by a Minnesota Farmer

It is cheaper to raise the good raft horse that weighs 1,500 ounds at four years than it is to uy them, but the inferior type can e bought cheaper than raised, as here are lots of them throughout he country.

I prefer the heavy horses for the arm as they do their work easier nd do not reduce in flesh as fast s the light horse, writes M. P. elzer of Dodge county, Minnesota, the Farmer. I also prefer the low movers for they are easier to andle and do not heat up as the st horses will, and most of the arm work is done at a slow gait. This means that all the work is one with horses and none of the eavy work is done with a tractor.

If the mare is in good condi- ion she is worked right up to the ay she has the colt, but not worked oo hard. If in thin condition she only worked when an extra orse is needed. In either case she s not worked for ten days tor two eeks after she has the colt, or not t all as long as it is possible to et along without her.

Skim Milk Is Valuable for the Growing Pigs

Every breeder of pigs knows how aluable skim milk is for growing igs. In the standard book "Feeds nd Feeding," Professors Henry and Morrison state: "For swine of all ges, and especially for young pigs, kim milk is unsurpassed as a sup- lement to the carbonaceous grains." In districts where there is o fresh skim milk dry skim milk will supply the same healthy growth s fresh skim milk will. One pound of dry skim milk (dry in grain mix, r in water to drink) equals three ounds of corn for gain in weight.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Live stock, as well as people, need sunlight.

* * *

Corn, oats and oil meal will push lambs along for the early summer market.

* * *

When docking with a knife, if you see one lamb is bleeding too much, you can tie a twine around the tail for a day.

* * *

For baby beef, heifer calves fin- sh quicker than steers and are worth more on the market than steer calves fed for the same length of time and under the same condi- tions.

* * *

You may have your ewes in ever so fine condition, and still the lambs won't do exactly right unless you feed the ewes a milk-making ra- tion.

* * *

Colts given kind treatment when young give little or no trouble later when first harnessed and driven, as they have confidence in the driver.

* * *

After the calves are two weeks old they will generally start eating small amounts of grain if it is of- fered to them in their pails after they have finished drinking.

* * *

Pigs don't need palaces out there in the pasture, but the shelter must be good enough to protect them well in damp and cold weather.

* * *

A mixture of oats and rape for early spring hog pasture is excel- lent. If not pastured too closely, this mixture will furnish pasture until midsummer.

* * *

Horses will profit by the use of minerals, just as will the other farm animals. In this respect they will likely simulate beef cattle more closely than any other class of live stock.

LOCAL FIRM AWARDED VALUABLE FRANCHISE

Corner Drug Store Secures Exclusive 5 Year Agency for Sargon, New Scientific Formula.

Never before in the history of the world has the progress of Medical Science been so rapid. One important discovery will have a far-reaching effect upon the health and well-being of mankind. Some of these discoveries are startling in the extreme and absolutely disprove many of the beliefs, practices and theories we have known for a life-time.

As scientific investigators learn more and more about the human alatomy, the practice of medicine changes—the old is discarded for the new.

As a result of this wolrd-wide medical research, Science has discovered that good health is largely governed and maintained by three vital organs and fluids of the body. These are the liver, the blood and the endocryne glands.

What is more important, we have learned that these organs and fluids can be stimulated and invigorated by certain basic elements.

Having knowledge of these important discoveries, one of America's leading bio-chemists, succeeded after two one-half years of laboratory research, in combining these basic elements in one formula—which may well be considered one of the greatest health-giving remedies of the age.

It is called Sargon. This formula and the formula for Sargon Soft Mass Pills, which are an essential and integral part of the treatment, the the property of the Sargon Laboratories and can be obtained by no other firm or individual in the world.

This new scientific treatment, which represents much of our latest knowledge on modern therapy, has been acclaimed by druggists throughout America as a triumph in the field of medicine.

With the needs of their customers uppermost in their minds, leading druggists everywhere have been eager to be among the first to supply it to their trade.

Although introduced in Southern cities only a few weeks ago, Sargon has already become a household word. In the city of Memphis alone, over 22,000 bottles have been sold and distributed by local firms. Nothing ike it has ever been seen before.

The exclusive agency for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills for this city and section has been awarded to the Corner Drug Store. In anticipation of the enormous demand, this well-known firm has just received a large shipment of these celebrated medicines.

FORESTRY IN MISSISSIPPI

By D. Priscilla Edgerton, Supervisor of Forestry Education.

The American Lumberman of June 16 has as its feature article a story entitled Forests and Wood Prove Absorbing Topics in City Children's Study Course. This is the story of the ingenious work of a "forest-minded" fourth grade teacher of an Evanston, Illinois, public school, who is basing all the the studies of her class for two months on wood and lumber. The principal of the school and supervisor of primary grades in Evanston are cooperating in this "unique ultra-modern application of pedagogy" to the necessities and surroundings of everyday life. "This system is fundamentally based on a method of 'practical problem projects'", says the American Lumberman, "evolved a few years ago by the elementary school supervisor of Cicero, Ill. These 'project' take in the study of one industry after another, through the fourth to the ninth grades, about two months' time being devoted to each industry or 'Project.'"

This project is applied not only to history and geography and nature study, but spelling and arithmetic, reading and writing are all based on the study of the woods and lumber industry. If such a such a method of objective instruction be practicable and successful in Illinois schools, how much more so should it be in Mississippi.

During the past two school years, similar "project" work has been going on in Mississippi in the hands of teachers of elementary and high schools as well, if the number and variety of requests from Mississippi teachers and pupils for supplementary material made upon the Mississippi Commission of Forestry is any indication. Mississippi is the leading producer of the leading commercial wood in the leading forest section of the country, producing 13 per cent of the nation's supply of southern yellow pine in 1908 and 19 per cent in 1928.

When one reads in the latest reports on the subject that Mississippi is charged with more woods fires than any other State in the Union, and when one considers that fire is the greatest enemy of the forest and works the greatest injury to its products, the teacher is recognized as among those most responsible for the public opinion of the future citizens of the State who will gain or lose by their treatment of the State's greatest natural resource so far developed.

The cotton crop of 1950 will be taken care of in the year 1950 from the seed in the ground to the harvest on the market; the dairy industry of 1950 will rest on a few prtvious years of proper methods; the mineral contributions to the prosperity of the State in 1950 will be in the unharmed raw state until that year; the manufactures of 1950 will operate with the products of 1950 and immediately preceding years, except the wood-using industries. The lumber industry of 1950, on the other hand, the paper mill of 1950, the multiform wood-using industries of 1950, must operate with the crop started for them a score or more years before, the crop that is in the woods now and that must be protected and managed under forestry methods from today until the time it is harvested, if the industrices dependent upon it are to be perpetuated.

The Mississippi teacher's opportunity and obligation to the children of Mississippi in the matter of the rudiments of forest knowledge are therefore beyond question. The opportunity lies in the wealth of material at hand for a practical forestry problem project. The obligation lies in the importance of preparing the minds of Mississippi children for a real problem which will face them in their day and time, if they are unprepared.

Business men of today are mostly concerned with economic conditions of today; on the other hand, the teacher of today has a powerful influence on economic conditions of tomorrow. Mississippi teachers, by personal study and observation and by practical forestry problem projects and other instruction, will be powerful agents in the stablizing of an industry that has, in large measure, made Mississippi what she is, and in developing a genuine state-wide forest policy for the perpetuation of an indispensable and unexcelled natural resourse.

GRENADA DEFEATS SARDIS AT GOLF BY NARROW MARGIN

In the second tournament in which Grenada and Sardis have met on the golf course, Grenada won again, the matches being played on the links at Sardis last Thursday afternoon, June 21. Of the seven foursomes, Grenada won four of them and Sardis took the remaining three. The play was 27 holes, best ball matches, and one match had to go to 28 holes, being won by Grenada 1 up.

R. C. Trusty and J. J. Nichols, of Grenada, took their match from D. S. Irby and R. D. Swango, of Sardis, 1 up.

L. W. Martin and Bob Townes, of Grenada, lost to C. M. Swango and W. F. Carter, of Sardis, 3 and 2.

Dr. C. K. Bailey and I. O. Pearson, Jr., of Grenada, had to go 28 holes to vanquich J. H. Cash and T. O. Hunter, of Sardis, 1 up.

H. J. Guidrey and Barney Echols, of Grenada, won over R. S. Swango and H G. Short, of Sardis, 1 up.

B. J. Anderson and Hubert Calhoon, of Grenada, suffered the worst defeat of the tournament, losing to Calvin Flint and Bennie Mitchell, of Sardis, 7 and 5.

B. C. Adams and T. H. Meek, of Grenada, won easily from Dr. J. P. McCoa and J. A. Profilet, Jr., of Sardis, 4 and 3.

Sardis won the last match when Charlie Wriggins and Donald Sharp, of Grenada, fell victims to W. B. Cooper and E. D. Taylor, of Sardis, 3 and 2.

BREAKS FIFTY STRAIGHTS

Turning in a perfect score, F. R. Lickfold, Jr. was high gun at the weekly shoot of the Grenada Gun Club Thursday afternoon, June 21. This was Lickfold's second consecutive time he took off the honors of the shoot. The cash prize awarded for high gun went to him, his nearest competitor dropping two of his targets.

Scores Thursday, in 50 targets, were as follows:

LIFE AS I SEE IT

blood course through your veins and throw your head back and gulp down pure gulps of life giving air and know that you are alive to all God's wonders and blessings that's worth a good deal to me and I think to every one that enjoys health.

To work hard all morning and come in to a simple meal and devour it with a real appetite as though it were the richness of the earth, that's worth something to me. To do things with a vim and not have that lazy run down feeling so common to many, that's worth something to me. To come from a hard round of exercise and take a cold shower bath and a good rub-down and feel the tingle and glow of real thealth, that's worth something to me. Yes, I think health is one of the most precious of all of our possessions and one that we value least. In fact we rarely value it at all until it is about gone and then we make the most ludicrous and pathetic efforts to bring it back and hence all the throng that seek it in specialists and special treatments. It is a good idea sometimes to take a short slant at ourselves and see if we have health and if so, be a little careful with it and a little thankful to a heavenly father who so magnificently gives us that no other can possible give. For after all, health is one possession that money nor any of its kindred associates can ever buy. It is one possession that anyone may well be proud of.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Possessing characteristics that have earned him the nickname "Go Ahead," George Morton, Virginian, is the recipient of a communication (intended for his father, who is in the East) from Tom "Fair," asking the senior Morton, for sake of old friendship, to send some one to rescue his foster daughter, Stella, a relative of the Mortons, from a band of outlaws of whom "Fair" is the leader. "Fair" himself cannot bring her out, being watched by an enemy whom he designates only as "Jim." In the absence of his father, Go Ahead decides to go for Stella. As a cowboy, but with credentials as an official of the United States Secret Service, he leaves for Loboville, the place designated, with a colored attendant, Caesar.

CHAPTER II. — At "Robbers' Roost," the outlaws' stronghold, Fair explains the situation to Stella. The girl, eighteen years old, does not want to leave her adopted father or give up the free life she has led, more like a boy than a girl.

CHAPTER III.—Fair, at Jim Barker's direction (the "Jim" the outlaw had referred to, and the sheriff of the county) sends a gang to run a shipment of rifles and ammunition into Mexico and return with a consignment of whisky. He puts a man, Wade, whom he knows is his enemy, in charge. Unknown to Fair, Stella, with Wade's connivance, rides, dressed as a boy, with the whisky runners. Fair's messenger returns with the news that Go Ahead is on his way.

CHAPTER IV.—The bandits' errand is successful, and the party brings up at Barker's ranch. There Wade refuses to allow Stella to return to Robbers' Roost, making a proposal of marriage, which the girl refuses. Wade declares he will force her to marry him, and threatens to attack her. They struggle.

CHAPTER V.—Go Ahead comes on the scene, witnesses the struggle and overcomes Wade. He has no suspicion of Stella's sex. She tells him her name is "Bob." According to arrangements with Wade, Barker appears and is also disarmed by Go Ahead. A Portuguese cowboy, Diego, fires at Morton, and "Bob" escapes, to follow the gang to Robbers' Roost. Go Ahead also gets away and goes after the girl.

CHAPTER VI.—Stella overtakes the outlaws, her arrival astonishing those in the plot, but they say nothing. Jack Green joins them and learns from Stella of Go Ahead's presence at the ranch. He tells her who her rescuer is. Stella decides to return and rejoin Go Ahead. She is pursued. Go Ahead intercepts her.

CHAPTER VII.—The girl explains the situation and the two ride away from their pursuers together. By a ruse, they evade their enemies. Two of the bandits, lagging behind the rest, are made prisoners by Go Ahead, and the four set out for Loboville. Go Ahead asks "Bob" about Stella, but the girl does not undeceive him, though he tells her his mission. At Loboville, Barker's headquarters, the two arrange to stay at the house of a friend, Bridget.

CHAPTER VIII.—At the town, Go Ahead maliciously turns his prisoners over to Sheriff Barker as horsethieves. Barker, though staggered by having two of his followers given into his custody, has to accept the situation. Go Ahead sees Captain Carter, of the regular army, in the town, and knows he has a friend.

The three men turned away, and Go Ahead looked around for Caesar and the horses he was to bring. Caesar was not visible, however; no one was visible, for the matter of that, except one man sitting on a bench close by. So he started back to the hotel.

At the door Bridget met him. "I've just been gettin' word from Fair," she said. "If you an' Bob will be leavin' about two o'clock in the mornin' so as to get to the J/B ranch about daylight, you'll find Stella there. If you don't find her soon, ride on toward Mustin and she'll be with you afore you get there."

Bridget's words were accurate enough, as a whole and in detail, though they were somewhat misleading in spirit.

Go Ahead's face fell. The pending meeting was exactly what he had come West for, but it had been arranged with a speed that was not altogether welcome. It involved his leaving Loboville with a sudden fuss that would permit Barker to assert and other people to believe that he had weakened and run away. Of course he could and would keep his promise to "drop in" on Barker before he went, but he could not afford to notify him when and where he was going, for to do so would be to endanger Stella. As a matter of fact he did not want to leave Loboville until he had smashed Barker completely—to Fair's advantage.

Nevertheless he could not disregard Fair's instructions, the authenticity of which he had no reason in the world to doubt. He must not only meet his cousin, but he must take her immediately East. He could not get back in less than ten days, and what might happen in ten days he could not guess. However—

Abruptly he dismissed the matter from his mind. His duty was plain. He must set about it and consider later what was to be done next.

"All right," he answered. "Bob and I'll be there on time. Where's Fair's messenger? I'd like to talk to him."

"He didn't dare wait. Sure it would get him in bad if any of Barker's spies recognized him."

"All right. Er—where's Bob?"

"Be aisy. He's asleep now, an' if it's knowing anything about boys

"Be Aisy. He's Asleep Now."

I do, he won't be wakin' for twelve hours if he's left alone."

"Good. I've got an appointment to keep tonight and some things to attend to right away if we're to be getting away before daylight. And I'd just as soon that Bob shouldn't know ever. He'd give me Hail Columbia if he found out I'd done anything without him. So—"

"I'll not tell him."

Bridget turned away, and Go Ahead went back to the door to look for Caesar. He found him standing by the rack with four horses, which, obedient to instructions, he had obtained somewhere. Out and over to him he went, noting out of the tail of his eye that the fourth of the diners who had waited outside was still sitting on the bench by the door.

"Those the best horses you could find?" he remarked, contemptuously—and loudly enough for the man by the door to hear.

Caesar fell in with his lead immediately. "Yassah!" he answered promptly. "Ain't they fine?"

"Fine? Those things?" Go Ahead bent down to examine a hoof. "Have the best three just east of town on the main road at two o'clock tomorrow morning," he breathed. Then he straightened up. "Look here," he exclaimed aloud, "I'm no d—n tenderfoot. If you want to sell me horses you bring good ones—and bring 'em by nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Understand?"

"Yassuh. Yassuh."

Without a nod or a word further, Go Ahead strode off, up the road, toward town.

Down the broad white road he walked briskly, till just opposite the sheriff's office; then, turning on his heel, he crossed the road, opened the door of the office, beneath whose lowered window shades he could see a thin line of light, and walked in.

"Evening, sheriff," he said.

CHAPTER X

WHEN Go Ahead walked off with Stella, the sheriff watched him for a moment, then strode back into his office, called certain of his minions, and ordered them to keep a close watch on Go Ahead. This done he sent for Go Ahead's prisoners.

Smilingly the men came in, convinced by the fact that he had sent for them that all that had happened in front of the office had been a farce played for the benefit of the onlookers, and that now they were to be set free, perhaps even to be complimented on the way they had behaved.

But Barker was in no mood for smiles or smirkings. Outside, he had concealed the rage that was seething within him because he dared not give it vent; later, inside his office, he had held it in leash because he did not wish his subordinates to guess (as if anyone doubted it) that he had been holding it in. But the first sight of the bandits' grinning faces broke through his defense; and he threw all restraint to the winds.

Like a hurricane his wrath descended on the two helpless prisoners. He cursed them by the lords of heaven and of hell, by their ancestors and their progeny, by their looseness of tongue and by their lack of brain; he heaped upon them epithets which had been conceived by men who wallowed in the primeval ooze and which, rephrased in every generation, have been handed down through the ages; he spared them nothing that brain could devise and tongue could utter. Even an asbestos record would have flared up before it had recorded half that he uttered.

Under the impact of his words the two men quailed as if from the beat of a literal tornado. For in his eyes they thought they read promise of sudden death.

"For two bits, I'd let you hang," he choked at last. "But I'm going to let you get away this time because I need you. But if you ever make such double-d—d fools of yourselves again I'll skin you alive."

The two men drew long breaths. They were, at best, mere riffraff, cowardly, cruel, dull and brutish, who had drifted into crime because they had lacked intelligence to earn their livings by any other way. They were used to being cursed, though not so sharply as by Barker, and they never thought of resenting it. They were only too glad to get away under any conditions. With lightened hearts they waited to learn for what they were needed.

It was a simple task, after all. "Miller'll take you back to your cell," explained Barker, "and give you files. You take them an' get busy on the bars in your window. Soon's it's dark—an' I want 'em filed through by then—Miller'll give you a couple of horses. You get out of town quick's you can and ride like the devil to Robbers' Roost. Don't go near Fair. Hunt up Wade instead an' tell him that the man we saw at the J/B ranch and the girl we were chasin' are both here. Tell him the girl's mashed on the buckaroo an' 's gone clear over to him, an' if he don't want to see her showin' the doughboys the way to the Roost he'd better come quick an' carry them off. Get me?"

The men nodded. But Hen did more. Hen had an incurably clacking tongue. "Maybe the gal ain't gone back on us," he said. "She signed to us to keep still about knowin' her and whispered that she'd fix things for us. An' she did persuade the man to turn us over to you."

"Say that again." Barker's order came sharply.

Hen said it again in almost the same words. "I guess she thought that was the surest way of getting us free," he finished.

"The devil she did." Barker's voice showed profound amazement. For a moment he wondered if Stella could actually still be loyal to the band and had kept and would keep its secrets. But very quickly he dismissed the idea. If she had really had the men turned over to him, she had done so for her own reasons and not from any love for him and Wade; of this he felt very sure. Perhaps she had so far kept the location of the Roost secret for her foster father's sake; but that she would continue to do so was unbelievable.

"Don't matter," he went on, to the men. "You tell Wade what I said. Tell him I ain't sure she's told where the Roost is yet, but I am sure she's told pretty near everything else she knows an' she'll tell about the Roost by tomorrow if she's here to tell. Tell him to bring his men to the North Arroyo crossin' just north of town an' leave them there an' come to this office for the latest news. There's a captain and a half platoon of doughboys come in here today, an' the moonlight tonight will make it too risky to race around town promiscuous. You get all that?"

Yes, the men got it; or so they said.

Some two hours later, in the brief interval between the setting of the sun and the rising of the moon, the two bandits climbed through their doctored window and scurried away to the North Arroyo, where they mounted their horses and hurried away.

And not long afterward Go Ahead walked in on Barker with his careless greeting.

At the sound of the opening door Barker and Miller, seated at the table and engaged in earnest (and profane) conversation, sprang to their feet, dropping their hands to their pistol butts as they moved. But an instant later Barker, noting that both of Go Ahead's hands were in the loose pockets of his coat and that each pocket showed a suspicious looking protuberance that might well be due to a revolver muzzle, took away his hands, an act that Miller speedily imitated.

"Evenin'," replied Barker, to Go Ahead's greeting. "Come in an' sit down. Didn't hardly expect you tonight. Thought you and Bob would be too chummy."

Barker intended his words to be insulting; like Bridget, he wanted to trap Go Ahead into some word or glance that might betray knowledge of Bob's sex. But as Go Ahead had no knowledge on that point to betray, Barker's words passed clear over his head. "Had to come tonight or not at all," he said lightly, seating himself so as to face both Barker and Miller. "Got to take the 9:34 train over to Mustin tomorrow morning. Be back the next day, but didn't want to keep you waiting so long's all that. What did you want to talk to me about?"

Barker, though easily taken by surprise and though slow in repartee, was by no means a fool. Given time, he could puzzle things out fairly well. Go Ahead had got the best of him twice that day, largely by taking him by surprise. But since then he had had time to reach certain deductions. In fact, that was what he and Miller had been engaged in doing when Go Ahead came in.

On reflection he had been unable to believe that Go Ahead could be merely an irresponsible cow puncher who had accidentally butted into the game at the J/B ranch. He might have accepted him as such if the proceedings at the ranch had been all; though why an errant cow puncher should interfere on behalf of a seeming boy whom he did not know would still remain to be explained.

But they were not all. After Stella had escaped, Go Ahead had followed her trail. If he had known that she was a girl such action would not have been very puzzling; but, assuming that he thought her a boy—and Barker really believed that he did so think her—it, too, clamored for explanation. Then Stella's abrupt volteface and attempt to get back to the ranch after she had talked with Green (who was a partisan of Fair's and who had been mysteriously absent from the Roost for a month) seemed to indicate some understanding between Green and Go Ahead and Stella—especially when Go Ahead joined the girl and aided her to escape. Of course Green had explained all this glibly; but now Barker was beginning to doubt the explanation. And, finally, when Go Ahead and Stella had turned up at his very door with such exceeding patness and had later gone to Bridget's (Bridget being a very old friend of Fair's), Barker concluded that Go Ahead had come to Lobo county on some very definite errand. Remembering Fair's opposition to his wish to marry Stella, reckoning that Fair had guessed that he had not given up his design and might readily have learned of his intrigue with Wade, and recalling the fact that Fair had promised Stella's real father that he would send her to her friends, the sheriff had little difficulty in making a shrewd guess at the truth.

So sure was he of the accuracy of his deductions that, now that chance offered, he determined to put them to the test.

"What I wanted to see you about is mighty soon told," he said bluntly. "I want to warn you that I'm going to marry Stella Fair and get her money, an' that no d—d imitation cow puncher's going to come out here from the East and carry her off."

This time it was Go Ahead who was surprised. But Go Ahead reacted more quickly than Barker ever could—and he was not enough surprised to take his hands off the pistols in his pockets.

After a gasp of amazement he laughed. "Bravo, Barker," he said. "Evidently, I've cruelly misjudged you. You've got a lot more imagination than I thought. Now tell me who the imitation cow puncher is, and why you're taking me into your matrimonial confidences, and we can talk."

But Barker was not to be balked. "Oh, cut out that bunk," he growled. "You c'n talk all right; an' you got the best of me twice today, I'll admit. But you can't do it again. I guess you think you've got the girl all right an' that you're goin' to get away with her an' her money. Well, you ain't. You ain't even got another guess comin'. You've used up your guesses an' you've played things a little too fine. You're goin' East on the limited one hour from now or you're goin' to stay here for keeps in a nice hole in the ground."

"That so?" Go Ahead's tone showed a confidence that he did not entirely feel.

"Yes, that's so." Barker's voice was grim. "You think you've got me because you've got me covered from your pockets. But you ain't. Why, you fool! It's me that's got you covered. You ain't the first man that's tried to get me in this office. I'm loaded for you and anybody else. . . . Don't believe me, hey? All right, I'll show you. And after I've shown you, you take your hands out of those pockets mighty careful and put 'em up."

With his foot the sheriff pressed a spring; and the three window blinds of the room, suddenly released, shot upward with a whirr. Framed in each window stood a man with revolver trained on Go Ahead.

"Put 'em up," reiterated the sheriff.

But Go Ahead did not put his hands up. He did not even take them out of his pockets. Instead he laughed and rose—very, very leisurely—to his feet. He had no desire to provoke the men at the windows to action.

"Good stuff, Barker," he admitted. "Trouble is, old man, I think about two jumps ahead of you. I asked Captain Carter to surround this place as soon as he saw me enter it tonight; and I haven't the least doubt that he's done it. The regulars are apt to be on time, you know—listen."

Go Ahead was romancing. He had sent no word to Captain Carter. He was trapped and his chance of escaping was infinitesimal. He knew very well that Barker had no intention in the world of sending him away by train, that the suggestion of such sending was merely to get him to take his hands from the revolvers that covered Barker. Once he did that his shrift would be short. He said what he did on the bare chance that his words might create a diversion that would give him a chance for his life.

But while he spoke, he heard, they all heard, in the road without the rasp of a sharp order and the quickly following beat of footsteps.

At the sound Go Ahead spun round to the window, jerking his pistols free as he moved. But he had no use for them. The men at the window had vanished, and he swung back in time to stop Barker and Miller from attempting to fire. "Easy, boys, easy," he counseled.

The next instant the door was burst open and Captain Carter sprang in—with Bob by his side.

"What's the matter here?" he cried.

Carelessly Go Ahead returned his weapons to his pockets. "Nothing to speak of Captain," he replied. "Somebody tried to hold the sheriff and me up through the windows. I guess you've scared them off. But I'm a whole lot obliged to you for coming, Captain."

The captain looked a little bewildered. But he shrugged his shoulders. "I'm satisfied if you are," he answered.

"I am—for the time being. Er—Captain, if you're patroling toward Bridget's I'll be glad to go along with you, if you don't mind?"

The captain smiled. "Curiously enough, I'm going to that very place," he observed.

Go Ahead turned to the sheriff. "Night night, Barker," he said. "Be sure to see me off on the 9:34 tomorrow morning."

Smilingly Go Ahead followed the captain out of the office. But as he stepped through the door he caught Stella's hand and pressed it. "Thank you, boy," he said, feelingly. "That's the second time you've saved my life today. How did you know where I'd gone?"

Stella's breath was coming very quickly. "I made Bridget tell me," she whispered. "Then I went for the captain and the men. We've been waiting outside. When the blinds went up and I saw those men outlined against the light with their guns—Oh, Go Ahead, if you'd been killed I'd have hunted them down and killed them both!"
